Combined News Services

PHONG DIEN, Vietnam, Saturday — U.S. Marine helicopters were recommit- ted to the Vietnam war today in the first allied counteroffensive on the northern front.

The U.S. Marine helicopters airlifted two battalions of South Vietnamese marines into a district on the southern edge of Quang Tri City, the provincial capital held by the North Vietnamese.

South Vietnamese forces have been pushed back 30 miles into Quang Tri Province since the North Vietnamese offensive began March 30 with an invasion across the demilitarized zone. The province lies just below the zone and is South Vietnam's northernmost territory.

Nineteen U.S. Marine helicopters from the amphibious ready group on the carrier Okinawa off the coast of Vietnam participated in the two assault lifts into Hai Lang District, about 25 miles north of Hue.

Early reports said the helicopters received sporadic ground fire but none was hit. The Marine helicopter force included 12 CH-46 SeaKnights, five big CH-53s and two gunships.

The helicopters are attached to a 5,000-man U.S. Marine force standing off the coast of Vietnam. No U.S. Marine ground combat troops participated in the operation.

North Vietnamese troops meanwhile, took virtual control of the province capital of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon, amid reports that Russia and China might be avoiding a confrontation over the U.S. blockade of Haiphong and other ports in the North.

Tactical warplanes rejoined B52s in hammering the besieged An Loc area after the first monsoon rains halted close-in bombing raids this morning. South Vietnamese defenders holed up in the military headquarters at the southern edge of the city as the tank-led Communists, supported by more than 10,000 rounds of artillery and rocket fire, battled their way through the city Friday and today.

Military spokesmen in Saigon also reported a Communist attack on Chon Thanh, 20 miles south of An Loc, where a U.S. Army adviser was killed and another was wounded, and on the district capital of Trang Bank, 26 miles from Saigon on Highway 1 — the closest raid to Saigon on a populated area since March 30, the day the offensive began.

Four American pilots were lost Thursday when three Air Force planes were shot down over An Loc, military sources reported.

Southland protests peaceful

S.F. police scatter 5,000

United Press International

Police firing stun guns, wielding clubs and charging on horseback dispersed 5,000 rock-throwing anti-war demonstrators outside a San Francisco hotel Friday where California Gov. Reagan and New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller were appearing.

A band of construction workers in hardhats waded into a rally of about 400 war protesters at Dag Hammarskjold Plaza near the United Nations. New York police forced the two groups apart.

Some 400 chanting demonstrators — most of them youths — carried their protests to Capitol Hill in Washington. One group made a foray on a congressman's office.

War protests subsided in Southern California. About 1,000 persons gathered on the UCLA campus for a noon rally protesting the war. Police were placed on standby alert, but no violence or arrests were reported.

Another peaceful demonstration was held in front of the Nixon re-election campaign office on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles. Most of the demonstrators said they were Vietnam War veterans, and actress Jane Fonda made an appearance.

An antiwar rally at California State University, Long Beach and picketing of an armed forces recruiting center in Long Beach drew 100 peace advocates. But such activities in the city came to a lull after protesters decided to join other antiwar activists at Los Angeles Airport Friday afternoon rather than picket the Long Beach police station.

At Los Angeles International Airport three persons were arrested for impeding traffic after about 200 protesters attempted to halt vehicles at and near the airport. Authorities said the protest was peacefully quelled and by 6 p.m. traffic was moving normally, "better than normal for a Friday night."

Peaceful protest rallies were also held at Loyola University and San Fernando Valley State College.

Protesters kept up blockading tactics at Princeton University and Westover Air Force Base in Massachusetts and blocked Missouri River bridges at Kansas City, Mo., for brief periods.

More than 2,500 demonstrators have been arrested in the outbreak of protests since President Nixon Monday night announced the United States was mining harbors of North Vietnam and keeping up the air war.

Cranston maps war vote plans

By AL EISELE
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Declaring that "the time has come for the people to take charge," an antiwar coalition headed by three members of Congress announced plans Friday for a nationwide "peace poll" to test public sentiment on ending the Vietnam war by congressional action.

"If the American people really want this war to come to an end, they can bring it to an end," Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told a news conference as he and Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, and Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., outlined plans for the massive mail survey.

Noting that the November presidential election is still 179 days away, Cranston declared, "That's 179 long days of death and destruction abroad and 179 more days of discord and division at home."

Other pictures revealed a brilliant cloud around distant Jupiter which scientists feel is large enough and cool enough to retain a massive hydrogen cloud. Some pictures showed faint clouds from other galaxies hundreds of thousands and millions of light years away.

Young, Duke and Thomas K. Mattingly II, the mission command module pilot, finished more than two weeks of reports and debriefings on their 11-day flight and prepared to take their first weekend off since they splashed down April 27.

Automakers refused clean air delay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government refused Friday to delay auto exhaust cleanup standards for 1975 model cars despite warnings that the result could be a virtual shutdown of America's largest manufacturing industry.

"These manufacturers have not established that present control technology is not available to meet the act's requirements for 1975 model cars," William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, told a news conference.

"... In addition, I am satisfied that the companies have adequate lead time to apply this technology, and indeed there is time for improvement to be made in a number of components of present (exhaust cleanup) systems."

Ruckelshaus said the ruling would mean that 1975 cars will be equipped with catalytic converters, commonly called catalysts, which combine with other exhaust cleanup devices to largely purify exhaust emissions before they leave the tailpipe.

Ruckelshaus said automakers estimated the cost of catalysts at $200 each, but catalyst makers listed it as closer to $50. The 1970 Clean Air Act which mandated the standards requires that the exhaust control systems keep working for 50,000 miles, but Ruckelshaus said the catalyst would have to be replaced once during the 50,000 miles.

The standards, written into the law, require that 1975 model cars reduce emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons 90 per cent compared with 1970 models. The law empowered Ruckelshaus to delay the deadline one year if automakers proved they couldn't meet it despite a "good faith" effort.

Friday's decision rejected delay applications from General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, International Harvester and Volvo of Sweden.

Ruckelshaus said, however, that his decision would apply industrywide unless some manufacturer presents convincing data, which he said he doubted would occur.

New FBI chief drops ban on women agents

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Moving quickly to give the FBI a new look, Acting Director L. Patrick Gray III Friday overturned J. Edgar Hoover's long-standing refusal to hire women as special FBI agents.

Gray said women could apply immediately to become the bureau's first special agents in history.

ALTHOUGH he told a reporter he expected to be criticized for the decision, Gray said "I feel it is something we have to do." He said women would be required to undergo the same intensive 14-week training course as male agents if they were accepted for the job, which pays $12,151 a year to start.

Women also must meet the same requirements of U.S. citizenship, and be graduates of law schools, colleges where they have majored in accounting, or have three years' law enforcement experience.

Applicants must be between 23 and 40, be at least 5-foot-7, have good vision and hearing and be able to handle firearms.

Hoover thought the job of special agent was too dangerous for women. When Mrs. Edgar applied last year, she was told that women "could not handle combat situations."

In a press release he helped draft himself, Gray said his action was actually required by an Aug. 9, 1969, presidential order which Hoover apparently felt was not applicable to the FBI.

Gray said Nixon's non-discrimination order — along with the recently enacted 1972 Equal Employment Opportunity Act — required the FBI to accept women. Gray opened FBI ranks to women agents after a meeting Thursday with the top 15 men in the FBI hierarchy who had worked for Hoover during his nearly 48 years in office.

MRS. EDGAR, 5-foot-7 and 120 pounds, was an assistant to Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., when she sued Aug. 4 in U.S. District Court here. She is now an attorney in the general counsel's office of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, where her salary is about the same as a new FBI agent's. Her husband, Thomas, works for the Environmental Protection Agency.

Third gas ring, organic rocks

New moon finds revealed

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Scientists released the first pictures taken by a $2-million gold-plated camera on board Apollo 16 Friday, revealing that a third ring of gas surrounds the earth.

This ring of gas was hidden from observers on earth by two other dense gaseous layers.

The scientists also announced they have found the sample of rocks which may contain the first organisms returned from the moon.

The sample was taken from an area of the moon that was underneath a rock overhang and thus in permanent shadow. This overhang protected it from the sun's searing rays which would have baked out organisms from any other samples returned by Apollo astronauts.

Dr. Thornton Page, chief engineer for the ultraviolet camera on the Apollo 16 capsule, said the third ring around the earth is composed of dense layers of oxygen and nitrogen.

Page and other astronomers from the Naval Research Laboratory said during a news conference at the manned spacecraft center that the 200 photographs taken from the moon by the ultraviolet (UV) camera gave scientists their first look at gas clouds in space obscured from earth's telescopes by our planet's own gases.

The camera was designed to search for hydrogen clouds in space because the gas is an indicator of water and many scientists believe hydrogen may form a large part of the universe.

"By taking pictures of these other planets, we perhaps will better understand the history of water on these planets and the history of the universe," Page said.

Other pictures revealed a brilliant cloud around distant Jupiter which scientists feel is large enough and cool enough to retain a massive hydrogen cloud. Some pictures showed faint clouds from other galaxies hundreds of thousands and millions of light years away.

Young, Duke and Thomas K. Mattingly II, the mission command module pilot, finished more than two weeks of reports and debriefings on their 11-day flight and prepared to take their first weekend off since they splashed down April 27.

Texas river banks burst, 11 drown

NEW BRAUNFELS — A foot of rain in one day bulged two Texas rivers out of their banks Friday, tearing away homes, cars and the people in them and flooding the countryside with water house-top high. Eleven persons were confirmed dead. The victims included the wife of a former mayor and a Secret Service agent who guarded the ranch of President Johnson. More than 4,500 residents were evacuated from riverfront homes along 25 miles of the muddy Guadalupe River. Entire families were missing. New Braunfels is located at a spot in central Texas where the Comal River joins the Guadalupe. Both rivers overflowed pouring water into the settlement of 18,000 from two directions. George Trigo, a Department of Public Safety officer, said many people simply disappeared as the water gushed through the town.

GIs can appeal 'bad' discharges

WASHINGTON—Servicemen holding Bad Conduct or Dishonorable discharges for using or possessing drugs may now appeal for an Honorable Discharge under a new policy announced Friday by the Pentagon. The Pentagon said Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird has ordered that these ex-GIs may now request a review of their cases. The order does not apply to those men punished for selling drugs. Officials said the new ruling affects only about 200 men who received Bad Conduct or Dishonorable discharges for drug use before July 7, 1971. The armed forces have since stopped issuing Dishonorable Discharges solely for drug use or possession.

Most young people shied away from pot

WASHINGTON—The National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse said Friday a survey showed that about three-fourths of the young people who have never tried marijuana would not use it even if it were legalized. In a newly published index to its full report, the commission said most of those who have not experimented with the drug said they shied away from it because they feared physical or mental damage.

Gas heater blast injures 9 children

DOUGHERTY—The fifth and sixth grade classroom of a rural elementary school in the Texas Panhandle exploded Friday injuring nine children. One child was injured seriously. "The floor came up and the walls went out," said a sheriff's department spokesman. "The rest of the building is all right." It was believed the explosion was caused by a gas accumulation in a heater between the two rooms.

Saboteurs cut off phone subscribers

SALT LAKE CITY—Saboteurs cut phone cables to about 800 subscribers, both commercial and private, in Salt Lake City sometime during the night, officials of Mountain Bell Telephone said Friday. About 1,000 lines were cut, and 80 per cent of them went to customers, phone company officials said. At one location where phone lines were cut, workmen found a note reading, "End the war by 1 p.m."

Black Mother of the Year

Combined News Services

A 72-year-old North Carolina mother of three Friday was named Mother of the Year, the second black woman to win the title in its 37-year history.

Esther Hunt Moore, of Hickory, N.C., an educator, civic leader and grandmother of five whose own grandparents were slaves in Mississippi, was selected over mothers representing 50 states, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico. Mrs. Moore, named at a luncheon of the American Mothers Committee, was asked what advice she had for the nation's mothers. She replied: "Be the best mother you can. Love your children but discipline them. Young mothers may be too permissive with their children these days."

An elementary grade and choral teacher for more than 40 years, Mrs. Moore returned to school to complete her own education after her children were graduated from college. She earned a B.S. degree in special education for the mentally retarded in 1959 and a master's degree from Columbia in 1963.

Mrs. Moore's civil rights career began in the early 1930s when she became the first black woman to register to vote in Catawba County, North Carolina. Asked her views on women's lib, Mrs. Moore answered slowly: "A woman should be a woman in her own right without neglecting her home and children. Helping her children to reach their greatest potential should come first."

Black Panther leader Huey Newton and his bodyguard pleaded innocent Friday to misdemeanor charges in the beating of a disc jockey in an Oakland bar. Newton and Robert Bay were ordered to appear in Municipal Court May 26 for setting of a trial date. The two were arrested April 27 on battery complaints filed by Alonzo Miller, 28, disc jockey for KDIA, Oakland.

Lennon praised

Entertainer Dick Cavett urged the government Friday not to deport former Beatle John Lennon and his wife, Yoko. Their case was adjourned until Wednesday. Thomas Hoving, director of the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art, also appeared as a character witness. "If he were a painter he would be hanging in the Metropolitan Museum," said Hoving. The government seeks to deport the Lennons on the ground that he was convicted of marijuana possession in England. Allen Klein, a business associate of the former rock singer and pop poet, said the Lennons' holdings in the U.S. amount to $50 million a year, and that up to 150 families depend on them for their livelihood.

Ziegler party

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler celebrated his 33rd birthday Friday. Ziegler was presented a silver ice bucket by his staff, inscribed with their signatures. His wife Nancy gave him a needle-point pillow bearing a likeness of the Republican party insignia — an elephant. She arranged a small birthday party for him Friday evening.

Lady of law

Sixteen assistant U.S. attorneys have a new boss with a reputation as a tough-minded crimefighter. She's Marsha Lyons, 25 and blonde.

"In law, almost everything is rough for a woman," said Mrs. Lyons, "but you develop a thick skin early and it's a most interesting life." Mrs. Lyons was named Friday to head the Miami criminal division of U.S. Attorney Robert Rust's staff. She will supervise 16 lawyers, all but two of them men. "It's quite a challenge for anyone, especially a woman," she said. Mrs. Lyons, daughter of a career Air Force master sergeant, attended the University of South Florida in Tampa and graduated from law school at Florida State University. Her husband, Doug, also is an attorney.

The President strolled briefly through surrounding woods but spent considerable time working and conferring by telephone with White House advisers Henry Kissinger, John Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman.

Johnson tests

Former President Johnson Friday underwent a series of tests at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio "to determine the amount of damage done by his latest heart attack," a Brooke spokesman said. He is expected to return to the LBJ ranch 90 miles away during the weekend.

Romania, East Germany sign rapport pact

VIENNA — Romania and East Germany signed a new 20-year friendship pact Friday, stressing the need for Western diplomatic recognition of East Germany. But they were conspicuously silent on their disagreements in other key foreign policy matters. Chile asks ITT expropriation SANTIAGO — President Salvador Allende, with "profound satisfaction," asked Congress Friday to expropriate the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation's 70 per cent interest in Chile's largest telephone company. Allende said "the dignity and the independence of the nation demanded such action" as a reprisal for ITT's alleged efforts to prevent his inauguration as the hemisphere's first freely elected Marxist president in November 1970. ITT's alleged contacts with American officials in Washington, inquiring about possible ways of blocking Allende's inauguration, first were revealed by Columnist Jack Anderson in March.

Antidrug training urged for teachers

From Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisors were urged Friday to back pending legislation which would require prospective teachers to complete a course in drug abuse as a condition of getting their credentials. The call for support of the proposed bill came from the county's Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs Commission. Commission chairman Dr. George C. Andersen said his group felt the measure, Assembly Bill 884, would be a "major step forward." However, he said, the commission also felt it should be amended to provide a grace period for existing teachers to get the necessary drug abuse training.

Andersen said AB 884 will be heard by an Assembly Committee May 22 and 23 and asked the board to authorize travel expenses for four commissioners to present the county viewpoint at the hearings in Sacramento. Supervisors will act on the request Tuesday.

Change of pace

Why is there a sign on microwave ovens warning people wearing heart pacemakers not to use them? Does the same rule apply to other electrical appliances? S.M., Long Beach.

Some models of implanted demand pacemakers will not function properly if subjected to certain electrical interference. If the pacemaker fails to function it may cause dizziness or possible loss of consciousness to the patient. It can be hazardous to the patient who is totally dependent on the pacemaker for his heart to function. However, the pacemaker will resume performing when the patient is removed from the source of interference. Radiation leaking from microwave ovens, electrical razors or drills, gasoline engine ignition systems and other spark generating appliances are possible sources of interference when placed within five feet of an implanted demand pacemaker. Much of the problem has been alleviated since the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has limited the amount of radiation leakage from microwave ovens and manufacturers have shielded newer model pacemakers to protect them against external interference. Demand pacemaker patients may consult their own doctors or pacemaker manufacturers for specific information about their particular model pacemakers.

By your leave

I need your help in getting back pay the Army owes me. Because my finance records were misplaced, I didn't get paid from Oct. 1 through Dec. 11, the date of my discharge. I got only travel pay for my ticket home. I filed a claim Dec. 13 with the Army Finance Center in Indianapolis, Ind., but I haven't heard from them. R.L.C., Seal Beach.

An Army Finance Center official acted upon ACTION LINE's call and wrote to you to explain the delay in settling your claim. There will be further delays while the official investigates discrepancies in your pay account. "The discrepancies stem from a past court martial action and from possible excess leave time," the spokesman said. If you have any orders that show you were actually on leave and not AWOL during that period, send them to the official. You can appeal the eventual settlement if you aren't satisfied.

Male equal rights

I am a married man and own small amounts of property. Whenever I have purchased land, I have been unable to do so without my wife's signature. However, she has bought property and my signature was not required. Can ACTION LINE explain this? E.R.H., Lynwood.

It is strictly up to a lender to determine how many and whose signatures are required on a loan agreement. ACTION LINE was told by a local attorney. Apparently, loans you have obtained to purchase property all have included requirements that your wife co-sign for them.

Shoot!

Is there a fast draw gun club in Orange County? R.S., Huntington Beach.

The Southwest Pistol League is made up of members from all parts of Southern California, but meetings and contests frequently are held in Orange County. The dues are $12 a year. For a membership application, write to the organization's executive director, William French, at P.O. Box 4372, Burbank, Calif. 91502. Unlike the fast draw contests of the past where blanks were used and speed was the most important part, the league's members use live ammunition to fire at a target and accuracy is as important as speed.

ACTION LINE contacted Ford E. Stinson numerous times over the last six weeks only to have him claim several times that the deed has been filed and a copy sent to you. Despite his claims, the deed has not been recorded in the Bossier Parish Court House. You could write a registered letter to the Grievance and Ethics Committee of the Louisiana State Bar Association, 101 Supreme Court Building, New Orleans, La. 70112. Explain the entire situation to them and ask if there is any action they can take to assist you. Send a copy of the letter to Stinson.

6,579 in county win tax appeals

From Our L.A. Bureau
Some 6,579 taxpayers had their 1971-72 tax assessments reduced by $48.4 million in hearings before the county's Assessment Appeals Board, officials said Friday.

They said the board concluded its hearing May 2 after considering 8,621 applications for changes.

Of the 6,579 reductions granted, 81 per cent, or 5,346 were done on the recommendation of the county assessor.

Officials said reductions were granted in 76 per cent of the cases heard.

Nearly half of ballots already out

From Our L.A. Bureau

County officials said Friday about 45 per cent of the sample ballots for the June 6 primary election have already been mailed out.

They said 1,476,591 ballots out of a total of 3,223,825 representing the number of registered voters in the county had been deposited with the postal system by Friday morning.

Remaining ballots are expected to be mailed out by May 19 so that voters will have plenty of time to study the forms before the election, officials added.

Supervisors have called for daily reports on the progress of the sample ballot mailings to prevent a foulup such as occurred in 1970 when thousands of persons failed to receive the forms.

$9,100 in loot taken from L.B. club, residence

An estimated $9,100 in loot was taken in burglaries of a night club and private residence, Long Beach police reported Friday.

Currency and change amounting to about $5,000 was taken from the Tiro Supper Club, 2111 E. Artesia Blvd., by safecrackers who kicked out the lattice work along an attic wall to gain entrance, police said. The loss was reported by the club owner, Douglas J. Del Court of South Gate.

Burglars who broke a lock on a sliding glass door at the home of Lee W. Hehner, 2270 Senasac Ave., took $4,100 in photographic equipment, tools and a typewriter, officers said.

Mining firm cited before fatal fire

KELLOGG, Idaho (UPI) — Rescue crews worked Friday to recover the bodies of the last of the 91 miners who died in the Sunshine silver mine fire.

In Washington, investigators for the Senate Labor Committee said the mining company had been cited for 14 fire safety violations over the past 21 months. They said a previous fire at the Sunshine mine was so severe operations had to be suspended for six weeks.

Inspectors from the U.S. Bureau of Mines in Kellogg said they would inspect the 21 other metal mines in the area, seeking to prevent a recurrence of the worst disaster in Idaho's history.

The nine-day search ended Thursday night when shocked families and friends were told by mine officials that the bodies of the last 40 missing men had been found. Only two of the 93 trapped miners escaped alive, although 106 others in the mine when the fire started escaped immediately.

The Senate Labor Committee investigators said there were at least two other fires at Kellogg mines since 1945 besides the earlier Sunshine mine blaze.

In neighboring mines, they said, 300 men had to be evacuated in a 1964 fire and two miners were killed in a 1971 fire.

They said the Sunshine Co. received a warning in early 1970 for failing to provide adequate fire extinguishers in the mine.

Six months later the mine still lacked extinguishers, they said.

The 14 citations for violations involved failure to inspect and test fire hoses, the absence of extinguishers on portable equipment and the failure to take adequate steps against smoking and open flames near explosive storage areas, they said.

The charges were made in a report to Committee Chairman Harrison A. Williams J., D-N.J., and came as rescue workers went into the mine to bring out the last bodies. Officials at the small northern Idaho town announced late Thursday that the bodies of the last 40 missing men had been found.

that his panel had begun an investigation into the Sunshine disaster, was critical of the Bureau of Mines' enforcement of the 1966 Mining Safety Law.

"If necessary, we will propose legislation to strengthen the enforcement requirements and seriously consider whether or not this program belongs in a more responsive federal agency."

3 groups ask court to block oil pipeline 'Steal' of Alaska land hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three environmental groups summoned up a 1920 mining law Friday in asking a Federal court to block issuance of permits for the trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

The groups contended in their request to Federal Judge George L. Hart that the state of Alaska and oil companies sought rights of way far wider than the secretary of interior has authority to grant.

After two years of review, Interior Secretary

Rogers C.B. Morton announced Thursday his decision to issue right-of-way permits for construction of the controversial pipeline. The line would run across Alaska.

The project has been stalled since 1970 by a preliminary injunction granted by Hart to the Wilderness Society, Friends of the Earth, and the Environmental Defense Fund.

In their motion Friday, the three groups asked for a summary judgment on one aspect of their pending request for a permanent injunction against the pipeline. It could be blocked if Hart accepts the environmental groups' interpretation of the 1920 law.

The 1920 Mining Leasing Law authorizes the Secretary of Interior to grant the right of way for a pipeline across Federal land no wider than the pipeline itself, plus 25 feet on each side.

The 800-mile pipeline proposed by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. would be four feet in diameter and its Drilling on geothermal wells due

PHOENIX (AP) — A final environmental impact statement on a deep geothermal well in Southern California has been filed with the Council on Environmental Quality.

Regional Bureau of Reclamation Director Edward A. Lundberg said Friday the well will tap the geothermal basin underlying the Imperial Valley, on East Mesa, about 10 miles east of Holtville.

Drilling next month to between 4,000 and 8,000 feet is expected to produce about 2.5 million acre-feet of high quality water per year for the Colorado River, according to an Interior Department report released in January.

U.S.-Russ trade talks seen fixing new ties

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Secretary of Commerce Peter Peterson indicated Friday his intensive week-long talks with the Soviet trade delegation in Washington might bring the countries closer to a commercial agreement.

Peterson gave to the Business Council, in its closed weekend meeting here, a skimpy account of the negotiations with the Russian foreign trade minister, Nikolai S. Patolich. The talks will be resumed on Monday.

Peterson said the talks covered a very complete range of topics and were conducted in a constructive spirit. They have covered possible joint ventures of American firms with Russian agencies in food processing, chemicals, gas, steel and other products in Russia, he said.

He told the council members, including the heads of nearly 100 of this country's biggest corporations, that the talks also covered business offices within Russia to facilitate trade between the two countries and the types of machinery which might be established for future trade negotiations.

The secretary's report to the council was made behind closed doors, in keeping with the council's tradition, but Peterson briefed reporters later.

HE EMPHASIZED that the talks were conducted "entirely independent of political considerations." Regardless of the comprehensive nature of the discussions, he said, it will be entirely up to the President to decide later on whether political considerations would justify the signing of a formal pact.

As to what the Russians want from this country, Peterson said the Soviets have an interest in grain,

Galbraith to lead U.S. team to China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federation of American Scientists said Friday it will send two delegations of scientists and economists to mainland China.

John Kenneth Galbraith, economist, social critic and former U.S. ambassador to India, will head the economic delegation which leaves for China in September at the invitation of the Institute for Economic Studies of the Chinese Academy of Sciences.

Accompanying Galbraith will be Professor James Tobin of Yale University, a former member of the White House Council of Economic Advisers; and Professor Wassily Leontief of Harvard University, chairman of the University's Society of Fellows and past president of the American Economic Association.

Dr. Marvin Goldberger, chairman of the physics department at Princeton University and chairman of the science federation, and Dr. Jeremy J. Stone, the federation's director, also will visit China as guests of the government in May.

U.S. asked to 'grubstake' miners Seabed ores prospectors' goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Would-be ocean miners are poised to unlock the mineral riches of the seabed, but they are asking Congress to cover the costs of certain financial risks before the mine ships leave harbor.

N.W. Freeman, board chairman of Tenneco Inc., told a House Oceanography subcommittee Friday his company's ocean-mining subsidiary is ready to file a claim on any one of three seabed sites of manganese nodules.

From these deposits, Freeman predicted, significant quantities of manganese, nickel, copper, cobalt and other metals could be extracted.

"We find, however, that certain risks exist which are of a legal and political nature," he said. "It is the responsibility of government to minimize the risk imposed on its citizens, including domestic private industry."

Freeman testified in favor of a bill which would allow the Secretary of the Interior to issue licenses for mining the seabed in international waters.

The bill, backed by the American Mining Congress, would require the government to reimburse license holders for losses caused by an subsequent international agreement on seabed use.

miners before the expected international agreement is reached.

In addition to Tenneco, Hughes Tool Co. and others in the United States, Freeman said, interests in Japan, Germany and France are developing ocean-mining technology despite a United Nations moratorium.

He said Tenneco already has invested nearly a decade and $20 million in the field and noted that Hughes is financing research and building a $35 million special purpose ship.

He said the protection is needed because mining and processing methods must be designed around the particular characteristics of individual mineral deposits.

Dropouts' loss set at $237 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — A researcher has concluded that 3.2 million men will lose $237 billion in lifetime income because they did not graduate from high school.

The report to a Senate committee concluded that the resulting loss to all governments in taxes would be $71 billion.

THE STUDY determined that it would have cost $40 billion to provide high school completion for this group, but theoretically, it added, the nation would still have got back about $30 billion more than that in taxes.

And, the nation's governments would have saved an estimated $3 billion a year in welfare payments to this same group of men and another estimated $3 billion annually as the cost of crime.

The study was done for the Select Committee on Equal Educational Opportunity by Stanford University's Prof. Henry M. Levin.

Committee chairman Sen. Walter Mondale said it was the first attempt to place dollar estimates on the loss to our society of educational neglect. It is a landmark piece of educational economic research."

THE SURVEY group of 3.2 million men was isolated by census data. The group was made of men of age 25 through 34 in March 1969. Twelve percent was nonwhite, and 90 percent of this percentage was Negro.

LEVIN ALSO found that such an inadequate education seemed to be linked — it is difficult to assess, the report said — to low levels of participation in politics, relatively poor health, and bleak futures for the man's children.

The age group of 3.2 million men is part of a total group in that range of 11.8 million.

Freeman said the measure was needed as interim protection for ocean

HHH expects tough race in Maryland

By WALTER MEARS
AP Political Writer

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey said Friday if he could meet Gov. George C. Wallace head-on in the Maryland presidential primary, "we'd take him to the cleaners."

But he said other entries on the 11-candidate Maryland Democratic ballot will drain away some votes and make Tuesday's contest a tough one.

While Humphrey hunted votes in the Maryland suburbs of Washington, Sen. George McGovern was campaigning in New Jersey and Wallace was at work in Salisbury, on the conservative eastern shore of Maryland.

SOME 300 persons greeted Wallace at a Salisbury airport rally. Another rally was scheduled for Cambridge later.

Wallace generally is rated the favorite in Maryland, and appears formidable in Michigan where Democrats also will vote Tuesday. Humphrey said he cannot believe that Maryland Democrats want their 53 delegates to the Democratic National Convention committed to a candidate "who does not fit into the pattern of modern American politics."

Humphrey campaigned in Lanham, in the predominantly black suburb of Glen Arden, and among senior citizens in Silver Spring before flying on to Detroit.

CAMPAIGN '72

In Michigan, where opposition to the busing of schoolchildren has buoyed Wallace's prospects, Democrats will be awarding 132 convention votes Tuesday.

Humphrey said Maryland's is the more significant test, because only Democrats will be able to vote. "This is a Democratic primary," Humphrey said. "In the Michigan primary, its sort of like a tidal wave, Republicans can swim back and forth."

Where cross-over voting has permitted Republicans to cast ballots in Democratic contests, Wallace has been the chief beneficiary.

McGovern was to pick up his Maryland campaign today, concentrating on the suburbs outside the Capital.

AT A Newark, N.J., news conference, McGovern said the federal government should take over one-third of the cost of elementary and secondary education, compared to the 7 per cent it now shoulders. The added federal funds should come from "the elimination of waste in the military budget," McGovern said. McGovern's schedule in New Jersey called for visits to New Brunswick, Trenton, Jersey City and Elizabeth.

While the candidates campaigned for the approaching primaries, the voters still were being counted in the last two. New tallies in Nebraska indicated McGovern appeared to have won 15 of the delegates elected last Tuesday, and Humphrey 7. In West Virginia, scattered counts showed Humphrey leading for 16 delegate votes, McGovern for 6 and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine for 5.

Black Caucus sees gain of 2 Negroes in Congress

By ED ZUCKERMAN
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Black representation in Congress will increase by at least two seats next year, the vice chairman of the 13-member Black Congressional Caucus said Friday at the National Press Club.

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., said sure winners in the November elections will be Texas assemblywoman Mrs. Barbara Jordan of Houston and the eventual winner of a primary contest next month in a newly created California district. Opposing each other in Los Angeles are California Assemblywoman Mrs. Yvonne Braithwaite and Los Angeles City Councilman Billy Mills.

"There are several other possibilities of blacks winning election, but I'm sure of these two," said Hawkins, a five-term house veteran whose district includes the Watts section of Los Angeles.

HAWKINS, appearing with caucus chairman Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said the major issues confronting black voters this year are economic conditions and institutional racism.

"The economic situation has become more unbearable in the last year, not only among blacks but among Americans in general," he said.

"Thirty per cent of all Americans who are working full time are still not earning enough to meet the minimum standard of living."

The issue of racism is hidden in the current school-busing debate, he continued.

"Busing is a specious issue because it is of low priority. Quality education, career education, campus unrest and financing education are among the vital issues we should be addressing ourselves to."

"THE MONEY being spent on busing to achieve racial balance is less than three per cent of the money being spent for school transportation. It's a phony, false issue that is connected to racism. You don't see anyone in the House introducing bills to eliminate busing as such ... it's only bad when used for integration," he said.

Stokes said the caucus was formed in 1969 when nine black congressmen "came together with a realization that as black members of Congress our concerns and obligations do not stop at the boundaries of our districts."

With an executive director and seven staff employees, the caucus has sponsored several conferences to focus on black issues and develop legislative proposals.

The necessity of hiring a research staff became apparent after presenting a 32-page document which listed 60 recommendations to President Nixon last year, Stokes said.

"It took two months for the White House to reply. When the reply came, we found a 119-page document explaining why the President could not comply with our recommendations. It took two months and a staff of 200 people to prepare the reply. That's when we realized we needed a staff," he said.

dates for President were considered by a statewide sampling of 466 registered Democrats, reports Field, 35 per cent chose Humphrey, compared with 31 per cent for McGovern.

But when the field was narrowed down to five — Sen. Edmund Muskie and Gov. George Wallace, Kennedy, McGovern and Humphrey — 27 per cent chose McGovern, 26 per cent went for Humphrey and 26 per cent for Kennedy, says Field.

Next was Muskie with 9 per cent, followed by 6 per cent for Wallace. The balance were undecided.

Kennedy could be top, claims polls director

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Although they have eight candidates for President listed on the June 6 primary ballot, California Democrats are narrowing their choice to Sens. George McGovern and Hubert Humphrey, reports the California Poll.

But more of them think Sen. Edward Kennedy, who has said he won't be a candidate, would have a better chance of defeating President Nixon at the polls in November, says Poll Director Mervin D. Field.

WAR PROTESTS

made an obvious, prolonged effort to handle the crowd without mass arrests. When the melee erupted, the angry protesters surged through the city's financial district, smashing windows and yelling remonstrances against Nixon's Vietnam policies.

Police said 60 demonstrators were taken into custody, most of them on charges of failing to disperse. Reagan called the demonstration a "temper tantrum." At least one person was injured.

Police blocked off Powell Street, halting its famed cable cars, and ordered pedestrians of sidewalks as the protesters hurled bricks through windows. Traffic was jammed for blocks around Union Square, where the melee began in front of the St. Francis Hotel.

Chancellor Vernon I. Cheadle of the university of California at Santa Barbara issued a written statement to faculty and students saying he would not stand for a class-closing strike.

Classes continued normally at Santa Barbara and UCLA, and apparently around the rest of Southern California.

There were dissenters, however. UCLA Basketball star Bill Walton said that despite his arrest Thursday at a campus demonstration, "I plan to continue my actions in the strike and do everything I can do to close this school down."

Walton was booked for investigation of failing to disperse when police cleared protesters Thursday from a demonstration at UCLA's administration building.

In New York, demonstrators marched from the U.N. area to Times Square. Construction workers taunted them and rained bricks and lumber on them from an unfinished building.

Youngsters apparently of junior high school age vandalized the University of Kansas ROTC building. Twenty-seven persons were arrested in a march of 500 Kansas students through Lawrence, Kan. Four men occupied the roof of the City Hall at Kansas City and said they would remain there until the bombing of North Vietnam was halted.

AT CHICOPEE, Mass., where 921 persons have been arrested in attempted blockades of Westover AFB gates in recent weeks, demonstrators are to be asked to help the town pay part of the cost of police overtime pay.

Quiet prevailed at the University of Minnesota campus in Minneapolis after National Guardsmen cleared demonstrators' barricades away from nearby Washington Avenue. Some 2,900 students gathered in front of the student union building and heard calls for a student strike before dispersing. The National Guard troops, called out after violence Wednesday, pulled off the campus Friday night.

Antiwar groups in Miami said they would "mine" the waters off Nixon's Key Biscayne compound with balloons today in protest against his decision to mine North Vietnamese ports. Chicago Seven defendant Jerry Rubin urged some 400 youths at a campus rally at the University of Miami to "put 500,000 people in the streets" during the Democratic Convention at Miami Beach in July.

The demonstrators in Washington, apparently high school students, milled around under the watch of dozens of policemen. Most of them demonstrated peacefully but about 50 ran through the office of Rep. Pierre S. duPont, R-Del., opening desk drawers and spilling food and drink. Secretaries said they were afraid to call police.

FORTY-FIVE protesters, 15 of them juveniles were hauled away by police when they tried to block workers from entering the Institute for Defense Analyses at Princeton, N.J.

Police Commissioner Arthur T. Morgan told 125 demonstrators, "We respect your right to protest but we also respect the rights of the employees." Demonstrators shouted back, "We can't cooperate with you and we can't cooperate with the war."

It was the third successive day that mass arrests had been made at the institute, which demonstrators claim is a "think tank" for Vietnam war projects.

Cornell University spokesmen reported that at least 130 windows in buildings on the Ithaca, N.Y., campus were smashed by a band of about 300 rock-throwing, club-waving demonstrators. Police resorted to tear gas before the crowd dispersed early Friday.

Friday was a "day of mourning" in Berkeley, site of the University of California. Most of the city's 1,500 employees were dismissed from work at noon, all schools closed for half the day, and some businesses closed.

2 China ports seen as unloading havens

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) — Communist diplomats named two South Chinese ports Friday that could take Soviet arms shipments if President Nixon's interdiction of North Vietnam's sea approaches succeeds.

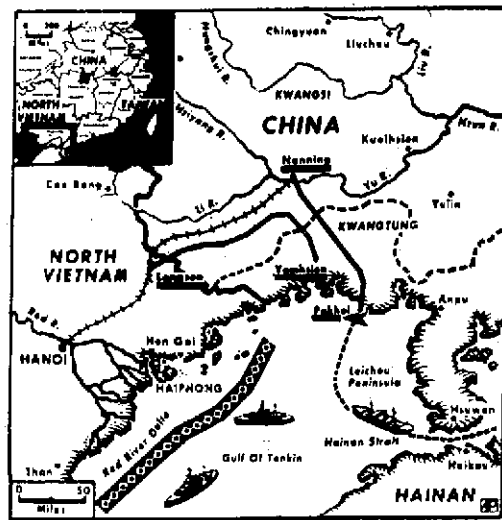

These senior diplomats disclosed that an existing Soviet-Chinese-North Vietnamese agreement already provides for the transportation of Soviet supplies by rail across China to Hanoi. Teams of North Vietnamese meet the sealed trains at the Soviet-Chinese frontier and guide them across Chinese territory.

The Communist informants forecast that the U.S. policy of mining North Vietnamese ports almost certainly will lead to the extension of the three-sided agreement to permit Soviet access to harbors in South China, which now are immune from attack.

IF THIS HAPPENS, the informants said, North Vietnam's lifelines to its northern sponsors will remain open and the Nixon administration's new policy will have produced extended cooperation between the feuding Russians and Chinese.

The two ports in south China identified by the Communist sources:

Pakhoi, also known as Peihai, on the Lim River delta. It is easily accessible to the railroad junction of Nanning, in the north, that leads to Hanoi. And it is linked with one of the eight roads that crosses into North Vietnam. Pakhoi, a modern deepwater port, is about 100 flying miles from Hanoi.

HANOI'S ALTERNATIVE SUPPLY PORTS

—Yamhsien, also known as Ch'inhshien, an inland port about the same distance from Hanoi. It, too, is inside a road network leading to the North Vietnamese railhead of Longson and the port of Mong Cai.

IN 1969, military advisers told Nixon's National Security Council the Communists could move up to 16,000 tons of supplies daily along the rail and road systems into North Vietnam.

The President this week said the rail, road and river lines of supply from the Chinese frontier southward will be bombed; strikes already are under way. These raids would, presumably, be intensified if the Communists begin channeling supplies through the ports of south China.

Targets, besides rail and road lines, would include bridges, repair shops, storage areas, distribution centers. The overall purpose is to deny North Vietnamese forces the weapons and other supplies they need.

BUT IN the view of British, as well as Communist authorities, bombing and naval gunfire alone will not necessarily sever Hanoi's supply lifeline. They based their judgment on the experiences of 1966-68 when the road and rail routes from South China came under continuous American bombing.

On the diplomatic front, informants said Britain's bid for a new Vietnam peace parley has run into a frosty Chinese reception.

CRANSTON MAPS STRAW VOTE

Congress said volunteer workers will distribute postcard ballots in all 50 states asking for a simple yes or no answer to the question, "Should Congress bring the war to an end by cutting off the funds?"

"If this peace poll — or any other convincing test of public opinion, not just in scattered regions, but nationwide, reveals that there is a commanding tide of public opinion demanding that Congress end the war, it will get the job done," the coalition leaders told a news conference here.

"IT WILL move members of Congress who have heretofore been immovable. It will bring about the return of our troops and prisoners. It will end our undeclared war."

Both Cranston and Hughes, who are leaders of the Senate antiwar bloc that has been trying unsuccessfully to pass an amendment to a State Department appropriations bill that would cut off funds for the war after June 30, said their latest effort is aimed at trying to focus antiwar energies triggered by the recent U.S. escalation of the war.

They also indicated a weariness with unsuccessful past efforts to influence the war policies of both Richard Nixon and his predecessor, Lyndon Johnson.

"Through two administrations, one Democratic and one Republican, Congress has been tied in knots over the Vietnam war," said Cranston. "Both Johnson and Nixon have bent Congress to their will... the time has come for the people to liberate Congress and end its bondage to war presidents."

However, they said the poll will give the nation a clearer picture of the true sentiment of people on the war.

MARINE COPTERS BACK IN WAR

An Loc's virtual takeover, as reported by the Saigon Command, made it the second provincial capital after Quang Tri, which fell May 1, to be seized by the North Vietnamese after heavy assaults in their six-week-old southern offensive. For the time being at least, they appeared to be continuing as before, without moving to challenge the mining and blockading of the seaports through which much of their supplies flow.

Diplomatic sources in Saigon said Hanoi had been evacuated except for essential government, military and industrial workers and that refugee centers had been established in the countryside to handle civilian residents of the North Vietnamese capital.

HIGH U.S. government sources in Washington, Saigon and Phnom Penh said the Soviet Union and China appeared to have reached a tacit agreement to let the blockade continue indefinitely while denouncing it in diplomatic and propaganda channels, possibly in the belief the North Vietnam will find alternate ways to obtain supplies.

President Nixon spent the weekend at his Camp David, Md., retreat in the Cactocin Mountains conferring by telephone with military and diplomatic advisers and preparing for his scheduled summit talks in Moscow starting May 22. There was no overt Soviet move to cancel or delay the Nixon visit.

In Paris, Le Duc Tho, the chief North Vietnamese political adviser for Communist peace negotiations, rejected an offer Friday by the American delegation to resume their talks, broken off May 4, if the Communists indicate a willingness to bargain seriously.

The U.S. delegation accused the Communists of "poisoning the atmosphere" in Paris and showing inflexibility in refusing to discuss both sides' positions. Le Duc Tho said the Americans must return to the talks without laying down conditions.

Although the Pentagon said there had been no Communist attempt to clear U.S. minefields or to run the blockade of seven North Vietnamese ports, the Japanese Defense Agency in Tokyo reported that a Soviet cruiser and missile destroyer which left Vladivostok Wednesday had been seen sailing southward through the Korea Strait between Japan and Korea.

The Japanese said that because of their slow speed of 10 knots, the 15,400-ton cruiser and 2,850-ton destroyer presumably were headed for training exercises in the Indian Ocean rather than any confrontation with the U.S. 7th Fleet in the Gulf of Tonkin.

CLEAN EXHAUST DELAY REFUSED

Ruckelshaus said car companies could appeal his ruling in court or — after enough time for new research — ask him again for a one-year delay.

Presuming the standards are met, Ruckelshaus said, air pollution caused by cars will drop in a "fairly steady and steep curve until about 1990" when the projected increase in cars on the road could start increasing pollution. By then, he said, a nonpolluting alternative to the internal combustion engine might be ready.

Henry Ford II, chairman of Ford Motor Co., told his firm's stockholders Thursday that failure to delay the standards could force suspension of most U.S. automotive manufacturing in 1975.

Ford said the result would be a shutdown of nearly 5 per cent of the nation's industrial capacity causing a "devastating impact on income and employment."

BUT Ruckelshaus disagreed. "I don't see the auto companies closing down in 1975," he said, particularly since if the outlook was really that bleak the EPA or federal courts could reverse Friday's decision.

"The issue is a close one," Ruckelshaus said of his decision. "Major efforts have been made and large sums of money spent by the auto manufacturers in their efforts to meet this goal and substantial progress has been achieved."

"There is no question but that the standards are tough and that to comply, present emission control systems must be utilized to their maximum potential."

He said manufacturers claiming inability to meet the standards based their conclusion on "what each one knew."

"Our decision was based on what they all knew together," he said.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., called the EPA's decision "A hollow victory" because the agency already had given the automakers major concessions which made it "impossible for car buyers to be sure they are getting clean cars or to force car manufacturers to make the necessary repairs if the law has not been complied with."

HE SAID the concessions were changes in testing methods, acceptance of an average of performance rather than a minimum standard, and negation of warrant provisions put in the Clean Air Act to protect car buyers.

But Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., a House backer of the Clean Air Act, said "EPA has fully backed the intent of Congress. This may well be the crucial decision that shows that we do intend to clean up our environment."

In Detroit, a General Motors spokesman called the EPA ruling "regrettable" and contrary to evidence presented in writing and during 13 days of recent public hearings.

Ford Motor Co. said industry "made a convincing case that the technology to meet these standards does not presently exist."

"We now will have to decide what further steps we can take to safeguard our future operations," Herbert L. Misch, Ford vice president, said in a statement.

BURN VICTIM WILEY CAMPBELL OF LAKEWOOD AND FOUR REASONS FOR LIVING
He Pays More Attention to His Family Than He Ever Did Before

'Back from fiery death'

Survivor of oil well blast credits 'medical miracle'

By MARK CLUTTER
Staff Writer

Wiley Campbell returned Friday to the home no one really believed he would see again.

"It's a medical miracle," Campbell said as he sat surrounded by family and friends in his pleasant living room at 21448 S. Hawaiian Ave., Lakewood.

"A medical miracle," say the people at Marina Mercy Hospital, Marina del Rey.

It began last Dec. 16. For Campbell, 39, it was just another working day as an employee of Union Oil Co. His crew was pouring concrete into a well at Santa Fe Springs, a technique for increasing production. There was a roar of gas which burst into a derrick-high flame. Campbell ran and rolled to a pool of water. Two men, Maurice Barnett and Victor Brooks, died of their burns.

"I remember walking to the ambulance," he said. "I remember sitting up all the way to the hospital in Whittier. I remember walking into the emergency room."

That was the last thing Campbell was to remember for two and a half months. A helicopter rushed him to Marina Mercy's burn center.

He was burned over 42 per cent of his body. That is, without medical miracles, fatal. He has undergone 18 surgeries, 11 of them skin grafts. He "died" three times — that is, his heart stopped beating. He has at least two more surgeries ahead — plastic surgery on a ruined ear and a cornea implanted in his left eye, now blind.

Except for three days his wife was constantly by his side in the daytime. He was glad to see her and usually talked during the period of his amnesia. Friends and relatives helped with the three children, Laurie, 13, Brenda, 12, and Terri, 5½ months.

"IT IS 32 MILES to Marina del Rey and I know everyone of those miles by heart," Mrs. Campbell said.

Campbell still has a way to go. He can walk, sit, stand, but the muscles are slow to relearn their business. He must follow physical therapy routines. He must avoid sunlight. His doctors promise him that he will be back on the job at light office work by August.

"I did a lot of thinking in the hospital," he said. "I can't really discuss it. One thing I decided, I am going to pay a lot more attention to my family than I ever did before."

Downey police crack 7-city camper theft ring; 9 seized

By ARLINE SHERER
Staff Writer

Downey police said Friday they have broken up a camper truck theft ring with the arrests of nine people.

A month-long investigation revealed the ring was operating in the Downey, Bellflower, Long Beach, South Gate, Ontario, Pomona and Montclair areas. The stolen campers and trucks were sold to private parties as repossessed or used items.

ARRESTED Thursday night on the charge of conspiring to purchase a stolen camper was Houston Lacy, 41, 1327 Colonial Ave., Anaheim.

Six men, one woman and one juvenile were arrested

Wednesday on suspicion of auto theft. The seven adults are:

Phillip Edward Fausnet, 23, 9128 Cord Ave., Downey.

William Ralph Alvarez, 23, Monterey Park.

Gerald Lee Rothenberger, 19, 9252 Songfest St., Downey.

David Earl Shultz, 23, Bell Gardens.

Eva Backaus, 40, Pomona.

Daniel Thomas Fox, 32, Montclair.

Ray Williams, 50, Montclair.

The case is still under investigation, according to Downey detective Bart Kirk, and police expect to make further arrests.

To break up the ring, nine Downey police officers conducted 24-hour stakeouts the week of May 1 to May 8. They worked together with officers from Pomona and Ontario police departments.

The intensive investigation began May 1 when Robert McDonald, 12236 Dunrobin Ave., Downey, reported the theft of his 1969 truck and camper.

Downey police located the truck and camper in Santa Fe Springs. A 24-hour surveillance led to the recovery of the truck in Norwalk and of the camper in the Running Springs area of San Bernardino County. The camper had been sold to a private party for $500.

FOLLOWING the leads, officers said they returned to Downey where they arrested Fausnet and Shultz attempting to steal a truck and camper. They then went to Pomona and Ontario areas where they arrested other suspected members of the ring.

Police have recovered a number of campers. Two were found Thursday in Anaheim and Westminster. Officers are attempting to find original owners.

Twelve campers have been stolen from Downey since the first of the year, according to Kirk, but not all were believed to be the work of this group.

Seminar set on marketing U.S. goods in Japan

A seminar for Southern California manufacturers who want to market products in Japan will be held Monday at the Crocker Bank building, 611 W. Sixth St., Los Angeles.

Ernest LaBelle, executive vice president of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, said the seminar is sponsored by the Japan-U.S. Economic Council and the Foreign Trade Association of Southern California.

He said a team of Japanese businessmen and trading company officials will conduct six seminars throughout the nation to help American businessmen increase exports to Japan and other nations.

Registration begins at 9 a.m. The seminar, including a luncheon, will cost $15 a person. It will adjourn at 2:30 p.m.

City OKs nonmetallic electrical sheathing

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Despite vigorous opposition from local electrical contractors and workers, the Long Beach City Council voted Friday to adopt the National Electrical Code, which permits use of nonmetallic sheath cable instead of metal raceway for wiring.

The council voted 7-2 to adopt the ordinance, which also includes the Uniform Fire Code, Uniform Building Code and Uniform Plumbing Code. Councilmen Paul R. Deats and Wayne B. Sharp voted against the ordinance.

Deats said the council was "knuckling under" to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, which had warned that cities must adopt the national codes, or they will not be eligible for federal grants.

LONG BEACH has a pending application with HUD for financial assistance to rehabilitate 80 acres around Polytechnic High School.

The council action Friday came at the end of a three-hour session, which drew nearly 100 electrical workers and contractors to the council chamber.

The HUD directive said that use of metal raceways for wiring instead of the nonmetallic sheath cable adds about $300 to the cost of a house, and insisted that cities must permit the nonmetallic sheath to qualify for federal grants.

The electrical contractors and workers contended that the maximum additional cost for a home using metal raceway for wiring would be $100, not $300, and said the metal tubing is safer.

CHARLES O. McCORD, business manager and financial secretary of Local No. 11, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who was the principal speaker for opponents of the ordinance, used a brief motion picture and a "mock-up" wiring system to illustrate their contention.

Both the film and the demonstration showed the results of an overload, caused by shorting the wiring, to both the metal raceway and the nonmetallic sheath.

City Manager John R. Mansell conceded that the metal raceway is better than the nonmetallic sheath, but said that the Long Beach Fire Department has had no bad experience with the nonmetallic sheath.

An estimated 75 to 80 per cent of all Long Beach homes are wired with the non-metallic sheath, Mansell said. The city electrical code was not changed to require the metal raceway until the mid-1950s, he

L.B. center launched to aid elderly

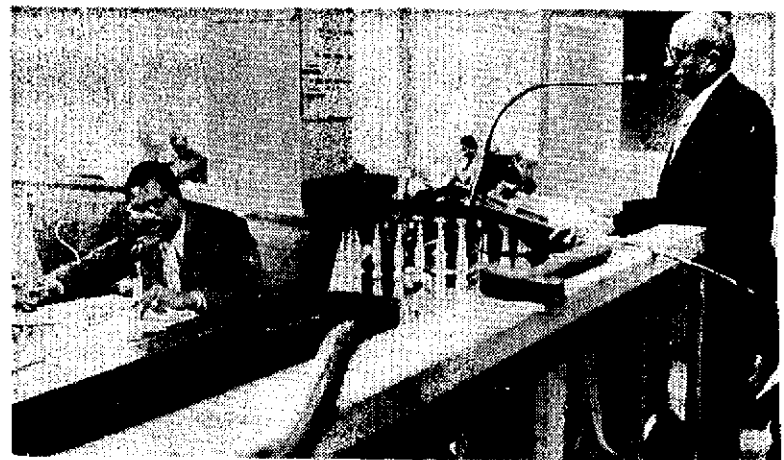

A new center for elderly residents of Long Beach has been opened by the Senior Opportunities and Services (SOS) organization at 406 E. First St.

SOS workers, funded by the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities, try to find part-time work for elderly persons and help them with their tax returns.

SOS aides also try to help elderly persons who have problems with housing, income, nutrition, medical care or veterans aid.

A MINIBUS is used to take the elderly to appointments with doctors and dentists, welfare bureaus, markets and laundromats.

Recreational trips are also planned to places such as Disneyland, the Long Beach Naval Station and San Diego.

COUNCILMAN JAMES WILSON (L) debates with Charles O. McCord, business manager and financial secretary of Local No. 11, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. McCord opposed ordinance adopting National Electric Code.

said. Mansell also noted that when the code was changed, the electrical contractors opposed the change from nonmetallic sheath cable.

McCord asserted that HUD was trying to "blackjack and blackmail" the city into adopting the National Electrical Code, and he warned that the nonmetallic wiring would not be as safe as the present code requires.

"The poor are entitled to homes, but they are entitled to safe homes," McCord said.

Councilman James H. Wilson, who made the motion to adopt the ordinance, said that existing conditions in the proposed Poly High project area are far more unsafe than they could be with nonmetallic cable.

"They are fire traps — and the fires are not caused by poor wiring," Wilson said. "When you tell me these places have to remain, I wonder about your concern for the quality of life."

McCord SAID the city was saying, in effect, that "we are not capable of taking care of ourselves."

Wilson said he "disagrees violently" with some of the regulations issued by HUD, but sees federal financing as the only means of eliminating the blight in the Central Area.

"Private industry extracts everything from that community, and puts nothing into it," Wilson said. "My community wants that area redeveloped."

At another point, Wilson turned to the crowded council chamber and said: "Nobody sitting out there lives in that area — nobody would live in that area!"

"I don't believe you're going to solve one firetrap by creating another," replied McCord.

The council also was urged to turn down the ordinance by Patrick J. Burns, international representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and by Fred Dunn, 2711 E. First St., an electrical contractor. Melvin Salsman, 4450 Olive Ave., a realtor, urged adoption of the ordinance.

Mansell told councilmen that the National Electric Code has been adopted by a number of California cities, including San Francisco, San Diego, Pasadena, Inglewood and San Bernardino.

He said the city had sought a waiver from HUD on the nonmetallic sheath, but had been turned down.

"We would much prefer the present system of wiring," the city manager said. "However, we feel the goals we have for redevelopment of one of the most dilapidated sections of our community need immediate attention."

COUNCILMAN Thomas J. Clark emphasized that adoption of the new code still permits home builders to use the metal raceways for wiring, and that the city can make changes in the code if the federal government modifies its stand.

"I would be one of the first to amend this code if circumstances change," said Wilson.

On Wilson's motion, the council asked the city attorney's office to draft a resolution calling on Congress to direct HUD to rescind the restrictions on city codes.

Councilman Bert Bond said the welfare of people residing in areas of Long Beach which need redevelopment outweigh the disadvantages of the nonmetallic sheath cable.

County urged to OK college-hospital pact

From Our L.A. Bureau

In a report to the board Hospital Department chief

Liston Witherill said the college will provide the necessary instructors adding that the arrangement would not involve the county in any expense.

Supervisors are expected to approve the agreement Tuesday.

Silence is often an answer.

Old Farmer's Riddle: What is it that everyone likes to have, and to get rid of as soon as possible after he gets it? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: I hope you can answer this one. A few years ago we visited a farm and the farmer had a trout in his well to keep the water clean, so he said. We now have a well at our country place and are wondering if we should do the same. B.S.M., Washington, D.C.

If you have a cover on your well to keep out bugs and the like, you won't need a trout to eat 'em. Bugs are all that trout will eat, you know.

Home Hints: When anything is made too salty, counteract by adding one tablespoon of vinegar and one of sugar... To separate stuck glass tumblers, put the bottom glass in hot water and fill the top one with cold... To remove paper stuck on furniture, moisten with linseed oil... Riddle answer: a good appetite.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

One of the wholesale-retail camellia nurserymen who introduce new varieties of camellias and azaleas about 25 years ago, believes erratic summer watering is one of the main reasons good-blooming camellias' buds turn brown and drop off.

Four years-or-older camellias need less frequent but adequate waterings. They should be watered from the base of the trunks out several feet. They need periodic foliage showering in dry localities. Camellias are fairly rugged yet camellia hobbyists in Bakersfield have to water their plants more frequently and shower bathe them daily during hot summer months.

CONSTANTLY wet soil causes brown spots to appear near the foliage edges. The spots eventually enlarge and in time the leaves are banded with brown edges. Rhododendron suffer from a similar condition. So do azaleas.

A nurseryman inspecting such foliage usually diagnoses it as sodium alkali leaf-burn and recommends use of one of the "irons." We recommend the gardener should first start watering properly, then he should apply one of the irons, as recommended, or use a liquid soil rinse containing liquid sulfur which combats the alkali condition yet feeds the affected plant. Once the proper watering technique has been mastered, the camellia foliage becomes a healthy rich green color.

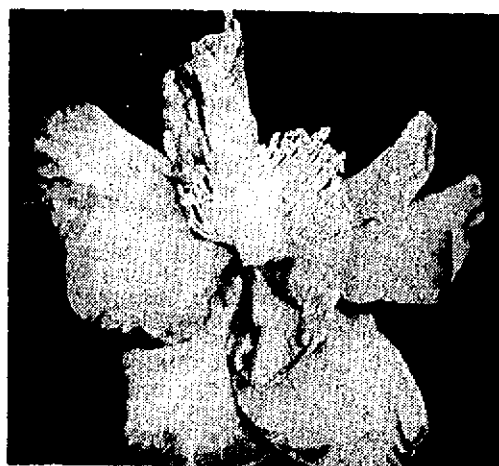

These dependable shrubs can be planted any time of the year. They can be moved from containers into the ground or from one container into another. They must have a pre-moistened peat moss or planter mix thoroughly blended with the soil whether in the ground or in the container to thrive.

SOME nurserymen have color photos or prints of camellias to show prospective gardeners during the nonblooming season.

The Japonica-type camellias are the most popular, and there are many varieties to choose from. King's Ruby is a large red, ruffled, somewhat peony-form camellia. It is a good husky grower.

Show Girl is a hybrid camellia developed from crosses between C. reticulata and C. sasanqua. The flowers are a medium pink and the plant blooms profusely as does the sasanqua type.

Many of the sasanqua camellias have willowy branches which are desirable for espaliering purposes. One lesser known landscape use of sasanquas is growing them in hanging baskets or containers, whether in the sun, shade or half shade. The willowy branch ends have metal nuts tied to them which cause them to hang down the sides of the container. The nuts are removed

CAMELLIA HYBRID 'SHOW GIRL'

JOBS TO DO NOW

AZALEAS can be pruned down as far as they need to be. New cluster of branches burgeon forth just below the cuts. The plants can be cut to shape with hedge shears if need be.

DICHONDRA LAWNS cover much quicker if top dressed with a spread mulch that provides a gentle feeding action. It furnishes a blanket-like layer which stimulates and teases the tips of the runner branches to grow across it. These runner branches send down roots. The dichondra lawn is kept moist as if newly sown until the runner branches cover the bare soil areas.

SPRAY OR DUST garden geraniums periodically to control the chewing worms. Use the spray or dust that contains sap-sucking as well as leaf-chewing control material.

when the branches are trained.

A HOME gardener was mystified because he couldn't find the bugs that nibbled off half-moon shape edges from the leaves. He couldn't find them because they are night feeders.

The bugs are tan color beetles, maybe one-quarter inch long. They slowly crawl up the plants after dark, then to the outermost leafage where they feed throughout the night. Come sunrise they drop down to the soil, burrow into the upper layer and sleep during the day.

These beetles not only feed on camellia foliage, but on oleander, gardenias, privet, saxifrage, among others. The gardener should water the plants deeply. Several hours later he should drench the attacked plant with a stomach-type insecticide spray. Then he should spray the premoistened soil just as thoroughly as he did the plant. The beetles are likely to absorb some of the moisture by licking their feet. As they feed on the leafage during the night the stomach spray will do the job.

Garden clinic

Q. — Can you help me with my apricot tree? It is a Red Sweet, is eight years old. It grows in the lawn area. This year flower and leaf buds didn't develop. There were only five or six flowers on the entire tree and they dried up before spring. The only new growth is on the ends of branches. A few small branches have no growth at all, yet the twigs are green. We didn't spray it this year. We have kept it well trimmed each year. It is planted in adobe soil. It has borne good fruit every year. Did you know you can slip tomatoes by just breaking them off and planting them in the ground? Mrs. D.D. Bridges.

A. — Deciduous fruit trees growing in the lawn are bound to eventually suffer from poor water conditions. The superficial surface dampness smothers oxygen from the soil. In such a condition it is probable that alkali tends to build up. That old tree needs to be deeply watered. The water should penetrate four feet down as far out as a foot or more beyond the drip line. The fruit tree grows much better in a bare soil area than in a lawn because the water can be controlled. The gardener waters the tree as the soil dries, I'm surprised you didn't tell me that gum oozes out through the bark of the tree. "The green twigs without leaves" may indicate that the tree is deep in the ground. Another possible problem may be a layer of hardpan several feet below the surface. (You never mentioned whether the tree is top dressed in the fall with a layer of manure or a spread mulch. The bone meal should be applied and the soil thoroughly watered a day or two before the manuring. Then it should be watered well after materials have been spread around the tree.

$351,250 to build auto park sought

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau

Supervisors were asked Friday to authorize payment of $351,250 to Salvador G. San Agustin for a court-ordered condemnation settlement on the former Manila Sands property at 1st Street and Magnolia Avenue, Long Beach.

Acquisition of the site for the county's proposed $3.2 million parking structure had been authorized June 10, 1969 and on Sept. 21, 1971 the county deposited $250,000 as security so it could gain immediate possession.

However a price settlement was still in dispute and the matter went to a jury trial with the panel ultimately awarding the $351,250 figure, according to a spokesman for the county counsel.

Supervisors are expected to approve the payment at Tuesday's meeting.

L.B. paramedic talk scheduled

The new proposed fireman-paramedic emergency program for Long Beach will be described Wednesday noon by Fire Chief Tullio J. Rizzo at a meeting of Long Beach Rotary Club in Lafayette Hotel.

Rotary officials say the meeting has been designated "bring-a-guest day" because of the special interest in the topic.

Briefly...

More than a flower, what's in a name, '72 rankings

By LES RODNEY

Mother's Day, probably because of the Christian emphasis on the family, has become an occasion noted in various ways in America's churches. Tributes are often meaningful and sometimes tedious and tiresome, with no red-blooded mother able to recognize herself in what she hears.

One little practical emphasis that we like is a Mother's Day reminder in United Presbyterian churches of the help to widows of ministers and missionaries through the denomination's Board of Pensions. It's a modest sum, but modest sums can often make a big difference to the widow of one who dedicated himself to other people, rather than to accumulating money.

None of the above is intended to knock the pleasant customs of Mother's Day. Enjoy your flowers, all you nice people.

THE CHURCHES of Christ, a fundamentalist fellowship, recently took pains to point out that it was not to be confused with the United Church of Christ, which is an ecumenical-minded denomination, composed mostly of Congregationalists. The confusion is almost inevitable among those who do not follow the world of religion closely. The two are so unlike that there is certain humor in the mistake, though the Churches of Christ were not smiling about this one.

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM
Long Beach, Calif., Sat., May 12, 1972

Anyhow, in keeping with the national trend which finds fundamentalist Protestant churches generally gaining more than the "mainstream" denominations, the latest figures reported by the Yearbook of American Churches shows that the Churches of Christ have moved up to the 11th position in this country with 2,400,000 members. The United Church of Christ, with a slight decline, is number 13, just below the two million mark.

ALL RIGHT, we won't leave you hanging in unsatisfied curiosity about the rest of the latest figures. After the Roman Catholic Church, which is by far the single largest Christian body in the land, though a minority if you just think of "Protestants and Catholics," the Southern Baptist Convention maintains its position as the Protestant leader with more than 11,600,000, followed by the United Methodist at a million less. There's a big dropoff to number 4, the black National Baptist Convention, USA, with five and a half million. Then come three denominations over three million, in order, the Episcopal Church, Lutheran Church in America and United Presbyterian Church.

Number eight is the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, followed by another black Baptist grouping, National Baptist Convention of America, the American Lutheran Church, Churches of Christ, the Mormons (last one over the two million mark), United Church of Christ and Greek Orthodox, both close to that mark.

In numbers of churches in the country, the figures name 296,187 Protestant and 23,708 Roman Catholic. The former figure does include some bodies not considered "Protestant" in the usual sense, such as the Mormons and Jehovah's Witnesses. It does not include non-Christian groups such as Spiritualists and Ethical Culture.

So much for statistics. There is a well founded rumor that the meaning of religion goes beyond numbers, though high numbers are certainly not without meaning.

CHRYSLER, FORD and the rest get publicity in the business section on their quarterly reports, so why not publicity here for the fact that giving to national and international missionary agencies of the United Church of Christ is up 5.8 per cent in the first quarter of 1972 over the same period in 1971.

Blood banks defended against skid row image

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

The day is coming — and sooner than we may think — when paying blood donors will be considered negligence in the eyes of the law, a San Francisco attorney told more than 300 members of the California Blood Donors System Friday in Anaheim.

Attorney David Willett addressed the association's 20th annual meeting at the Disneyland Hotel on the subject, "The Current Status of Medical and Legal Aspects of Blood Banking." The three-day session ends today.

"TODAY THE best legal defense in case of a lawsuit," Willett said, "is that the blood bank tried to find volunteer donors but was unable to do so."

"However, legislators, and the general public, are looking with more and more of a jaundiced eye on blood banks and the trend seems to be toward strict liability for the sale of blood."

Willett urged his audience to go out and "tell the good side of the story of blood banking" to legislators and the public.

"In the immediate past," he said, "only the sordid side of our business has been publicized."

"It is getting so people think every blood bank in the country is of the skid row type. We know this isn't true, but the general public doesn't."

"Now is the time, while various bills are pending both in California and Washington, D.C., calling for stricter and stricter regulation, to educate the legislators and the public."

"We all know the good things our industry does, the services we provide our communities."

"It's time that we ceased being reticent about it. It's time to go out and tell our side of the story."

"WE KNOW about the various tests we do, the inspections we conduct to protect the public health but that public doesn't seem to know."

"We must change this."

The meeting, which opened Thursday, has featured more than a score of nationally known authorities conducting workshops and panel discussions on every aspect of the operation of blood banks.

Today's concluding session features a three-hour panel discussion on "Problems Relating to Blood Transfusion."

ST. MARY'S SISTER MARY WILFRED THANKS LUTHERAN SCHOOL CHILDREN
Joseph Anderson, 9, class chairman, holds collection for hospitalized kids

Lutheran school to St. Mary's ... with love to the patients, from us across the street

First Lutheran Church school, at 946 Linden Ave., is practically "across the street" from St. Mary's Hospital. During a prayer class in the fourth grade, the kids, mostly from the nearby central city, were talking about the less fortunate kids their own age who are patients in the hospital.

They decided to take up a collection to buy magazines for the young patients, as a token of the fact that they care. Their instructor, James Shepherd, approved.

Notified of the gesture, Sister Mary Wilfred, president of St. Mary's Hospital, came over to accept the spontaneous collection.

And when she returned to the hospital, Sister Mary

Wilfred sat down and wrote a letter to the children of the fourth grade:

"Dear Children: It is with special pleasure that I accept your generous gift to St. Mary's Hospital. Mr. Shepherd tells me that you decided to make the collection during a prayer study class as a gesture of good will to the sick. It was with similar concern for the ill and injured that the Sisters of Charity founded St. Mary's Hospital almost 50 years ago.

"The Sisters were deeply moved that you felt such compassion at such an early age. It is especially satisfying to see young people thinking of the welfare of others ... I extend our blessing to all of you. Gratefully yours."

Large grant for anti-racism church program

CLAREMONT — The School of Theology at Claremont has been awarded a $434,600 grant to conduct a national program to combat racism in white suburban churches. The program, Project Understanding, will be funded by the Irwin-Sweeney-Miller Foundation of Columbus, Indiana, for two years, beginning in June.

The project aims to develop and test strategies for combating individual prejudice and institutional and cultural racism. It follows the Kerner Report's assumption that the key to the racial problem is to be found in white attitudes.

The program calls for co-operative action by seminaries, ecumenical clusters of suburban churches and local agencies. Models for church-centered action to combat racism have been successfully tested in Southern California during the past two years.

The school of Theology at Claremont is an official seminary of the United Confident living 'Don't Ms. me!' the mother said

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A little girl had panicked before a Sunday School audience. She was really frozen and couldn't remember the Bible verse she was supposed to say. In desperation she looked down at her mother in the front row for encouragement. The mother smiled as she framed the words of the Bible verse. The little girl looked as though she would burst into tears. Finally the mother softly whispered the first line: "I am the light of the world." The little girl's face relaxed, her eyes brightened and with great conviction she said "Oh I know my mother is the light of the world!"

To that small child her mother was indeed the light of the world. Maybe that is what she was made to be. It takes quite a woman to be a real mother. And that there are many of that kind we have no doubt. A lot of smart girls still realize that being a mother is a top-notch career job, one that's full of satisfaction.

ON A SUBURBAN road I pulled up behind a school bus. A boy jumped off, swinging some strapped-up books. A beautiful young mother came to meet him, punching him playfully in the chest. They went into the house laughing together. Even from a distance I could sense a mother-son relationship in depth. Think that kid will ever forget that mother? If he lives to be an old man, on his dying day he will call her name.

Another mother told me that mornings are bedlam in her house. "I have five kids to get off, four to school and one to work, and he's the biggest problem. 'Where's my shirt? What's happened to my new tie?' It's really something," she sighed. "Often I've thought of an easier job, like being Congresswoman and making women's lib speeches!

"But," she continued, "one morning not long ago I was cooking breakfast. The whole family was around the kitchen table, everybody talking at once. The radio was blaring, the dog barking. Sunshine was streaming in, the sun shafts striking the curling steam from our coffee cups. Suddenly it all came over me how incredibly happy I am. I loved all of it, noise and all, and those dear faces. I looked round the table. They were mine, all mine.

"Suddenly they all jumped up. A big smack of a kiss from each one and they were gone! My husband lingered for a minute, 'Honey, you are the greatest. Whatever would we do without you? You are home for all of us.' You know something," she concluded. "I wouldn't trade that for all the tea in China. I am their home, their security, the dear things."

I might add that this wife and mother is no so-called drab housewife. She is president of the local P.T.A., head of her church council and precinct chairman for her political party. "How shall I address you, Mrs. or Ms.?" I teased. "For me it's Mrs. all the way. Don't ever Ms. me! I love being a Mrs. The heck with that desexed Ms. stuff!" she glared. "Okay, okay." I said soothingly. What a mother, indeed what a gal, if you ask me! And there are many such gals.

Let me tell you about a career woman who is a doctor of medicine, but a real mother too. One morning her office phone rang. The voice did not say, "Good morning, Doctor," it said, "Hello, mom."

"Son," she cried, "where are you phoning from? Aren't you in Vietnam?"

"I am in a hospital close

Assembly to hear more on Angela

'SERENDIPITY'

Dr. Marcus Bach, director of the Foundation for Spiritual Understanding of California, author and former specialist in the State Department's International Educational program in Asia, will speak Sunday, 7:30 p.m. at the forum of the Center for Religious Research, held at United Church of Christ, 5550 Atherton St. His topic: "Serendipity—the Seventh Sense, or ESP and Beyond."

More than 35 overtures to the highest governing body of the 3.1 million member denomination deal with adjustments of boundary lines affecting synods and presbyteries (regional units) and local churches.

Sixteen overtures have been submitted on the subject of the Emergency Fund for Legal Aid, a topic that stirred hot controversy last year when $10,000 from that fund was allocated to the defense of Angela Davis.

Proposals range from suggestions that it be administered differently (mentioned in six of the petitions) to pleas for reconciliation on the issue (the sole subject of two overtures and mentioned in several others). Five would require that monies used for the fund be only those specifically designated for it by the donors; four others call for new guidelines and criteria setting out how the fund is to be used; one would cancel the fund, and another calls on the 1972 Assembly to "admit the error of the General Assembly of 1971" and to "offer its apologies to the whole church for this unwise ecclesiastical act."

What did Mom do? She closed her office at once, went to the hospital and walked through the ward amidst wounded boys until she sighted her son at the end. She braced herself, the worried look passed away, for now she must meet the issue, the mother strong person, into the doctor. As she went to his bed, she didn't hover over him, weeping hysterically. She gently kissed him and said with the breezy equality of comradeship such as has always characterized the American sexes, "Welcome home, son. I have missed you."

AFTER VISITING for a while, the mother said, "Here is the key to the front door. You will be coming home soon."

"I don't need it, Mom," he replied. "I've got the key to the front door. It is in my pocket over there."

This boy had been in fox holes, fought many battles, lived in muck, blood and pain, but always he carried in his pocket the key to the front door of his home.

Dedication, open house in Cerritos

The big day has arrived for St. John's Lutheran Church in Cerritos.

The new facility at 18422 S. Bloomfield Ave. will be dedicated Sunday in sermon, song, and open house celebration.

It begins with the service of entry and dedication at 10 a.m., led by Rev. Dr. Carl W. Segerhammar, president of the Pacific Southwest Synod of the Lutheran Church in America.

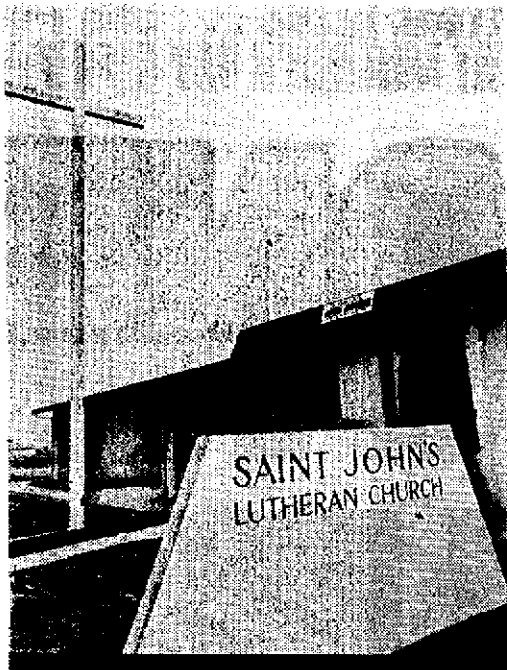

From 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. there will be open house for all people of Cerritos and surrounding communities, with tours of the facility, refreshments and music, hosted by the church's women.

Then at 7 p.m. there will be a songfest, and fellowship with families and young people specially invited to the festive occasion, and all heartily welcomed, says the pastor, Rev. Ted R. Youngerman.

St. John's Lutheran was founded in Norwalk in 1950 as an Augustana Lutheran mission, with its first service held in a funeral home. The new facility, which joins a unit completed in 1960, is constructed along early California lines and includes the main worship center, school facilities, multi-purpose area, offices and kitchen. A preschool outdoor playground is also provided for.

First regular services will be Sunday, May 21, at 8:15 and 11 a.m., with nursery care at the second one. Sunday School is at 9:30.

"With an awareness of today's needs and problems in a growing community," comments Pastor Youngerman, "and with the excitement of a growing mission, St. John's stands ready to serve the community in all phases of its life, as an extension of the love and concern of her Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. St. John's is a family-oriented congregation with a Christ-centered message."

LECTURER HERE TODAY

Jessica Pickett, former lieutenant in the WAVES, and former Chicago businesswoman, will present a free Christian Science lecture, "You're Someone Worth Knowing," today at 2 p.m. in the Ebell Theater.

A celebration, 500 marriages later

(ED. NOTE: Christian Single Adults, a non-denominational Christian group which holds programs and socials every Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in First Baptist Church, 10th Street and Pine Avenue, is holding its 10th anniversary banquet next Saturday, May 20th, with reservations required at $3 per person, through Mabel Fox, 435-9910. In a letter to this paper, member Germaine H. Gephart tell a little about the group).

Dear Religion Editor: Christian Single Adults has met every Saturday night for ten years, meeting a community need for fellowship for single adults of every Christian denomination. Single, widowed and divorced individuals have had a social and spiritual program in which to participate and the results has been more than 500 marriages, a return to church attendance and in many cases, deep interest in Christian involvement. Only a free will offering is accepted, which provides a speaker, or singing or musical group, group singing, refreshments and social time. When possible, an ad is inserted in the Saturday Press-Telegram; on the church page.

This program has had inquiries about its operation from all over the United States because of an article in Christian Herald magazine and many groups have attempted to copy our format. I guess the great volunteer workers who have given so willingly of time (and money when needed) are the cause of our many blessings. Germaine H. Gephart.

The Boys Club is an Indian reservation enterprise which operates bus services, restaurants, painting and construction businesses, and a number of native handicraft factories and stores.

FROM THE PULPIT
Dr. Frank Collins
Everybody's mother is a remarkable woman. There is no human name so enshrined in humanity's affection like the name of MOTHER. To many a person, thousands of miles away from home the name of MOTHER has the value of religion, pure and undefiled, and enshrined in a living personality.
Sunday morning we have a corsege for the oldest mother, the youngest mother and the mother with the most children present in church. In addition, we have a beautiful flower for EVERY mother present.
Let me suggest that you bring your mother to church and then, perhaps, a lovely meal at some good restaurant or at home. Church services with mother would make the day much sweeter.
My Sunday morning sermon will be "Mother's Influence on All of Life." Join us also at 9:45 for the study of the great 8th chapter of Revelation.

Christian Science

Would you like your child to feel close to God?

The simplicity of children makes them very receptive to love. And to God. In the Christian Science Sunday School children learn that God is Father and Mother to us all. They learn that all mankind belongs to one spiritual family—and how this truth draws members of an individual family closer together.

We would love to meet you and your family this Sunday.

Bill would outlaw food code labels

The "intrigue of a CIA agent" is needed for a shopper to determine the freshness of food on sale in California supermarkets, Assemblyman Henry A. Waxman, D-Los Angeles, said Friday.

He urged consumers to support his legislative bill which would outlaw baffling labeling of food products with coded dates of manufacture.

The Assembly Committee on Health will vote on the proposed legislation Monday.

Waxman told a news conference in Los Angeles that codes used by the food industry are "deliberately deceptive and unfair to the shopper."

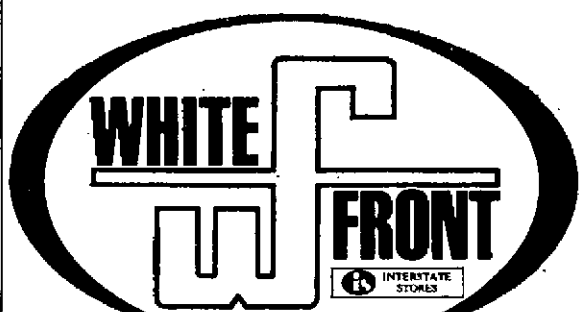

He displayed a wide variety of food products which he said had been purchased in supermarkets during the past week.

"All of these items should have been removed from the grocery shelves long ago," he said. "Without deciphering the codes commonly used by canners and packagers, housewives must take their chances as to the freshness of the food item. Without a code book, a consumer cannot attempt to understand the mysterious codes and determine which packages have lost their nutritional value or have become outright stale and unappetizing."

Pointing to a jar of peanut butter, Waxman said: "Little notches on the labels are used to convey the age of one well known brand of peanut butter. A notch at the top of the label denotes manufacture date in an even year; a notch at the bottom label indicates an odd-numbered year."

"The words 'peanut butter' contains 12 letters. A notch over or under the 'p' is January; over or under the 'r' is December. Unopened peanut butter may be sold approximately six months after manufacture."

Utility van

CHICAGO (UPI)—New electric utility vans designed to replace gas vans for city deliveries developed by the Chicago Development Association will go on display at Design Engineering at McCormick Place. Like previous electric vans this car has been designed with electric and batteries in mind. It employs transmission gears instead of revving the motor, and it is a wheel drive. The range 100 miles for steady driving and 63 miles for go driving before battery charges.

Rulings can get tricky

Q. I have some stock in my son's name under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act. Since he'll need funds for college in the fall, can I transfer some of the stock over to him for sale? As the stocks have gained in value, I don't want to pay a tax on them.

A. You've got me a little confused. If you have made a gift of securities to your son under the Act, he already owns the stock — under a custodian account — and no transfer's involved.

If you mean some of the gift stock must be liquidated by the custodian for the proper and legitimate benefit of the child's education, and there is a capital gain, then you'll be wise to consult a tax expert because the rulings get tricky.

I gather from your letter that you are the custodian of this account. When you made the gift of this stock, you gave the minor irrevocable title to the securities. He escapes taxation on income earned by the gift — if that income, plus any other income he might have, isn't enough to put him in a taxable bracket.

However, there's a separate question about your tax liability, if you use the income from the child's account to satisfy your own obligations to him as your dependent.

The Internal Revenue Service has held in some cases that income from a gift to minors which is used to discharge or satisfy the legal obligation of any person to support or maintain the minor is taxable to that person.

That's why I think it's a must for you to check your tax status on this custodial account with an expert. If, as seems certain you're taking a federal income tax exemption for this minor child, you need to have very specific guidance on the uses to which any proceeds from the gift account are put.

As I noted before, an estate planner should emphasize again, there is no question a custodial parent can sell stocks or liquidate other gifts from such an account for the support, education and maintenance of the minor. But you should definitely seek further guidance on your own tax liabilities incurred in the use of his assets.

Q. I've noted question in your column from time to time on pre-emptive rights for shareholders. As a stockholder in a small company where I am also an employee, may I suggest that you advise all stockholders to fight this idea of not giving shareholders rights when a company decides to increase its outstanding shares?

In my case, our company doubled its outstanding shares without giving the holders rights. So, what happened? The stock has never regained its price level and I suspect our principals are selling part of their holdings every time the stock goes up a couple of points.

A. The hassle over preemptive rights in becoming increasingly evident from my mail, and it is of particular significance to stockholders in smaller companies.

The whole idea of preemptive rights is to give people the chance to maintain a proportionate ownership in their companies.

Utility van

CHICAGO (UPI) — A

new electric utility van designed to replace gasoline vans for city delivery and developed by the Copper Development Association will go on display at the Design Engineering Shop at McCormick Place. Unlike previous electric vans, this car has been designed with electric and heavy batteries in mind. It also employs transmission gears instead of reversing the motor, and it is front-wheel drive. The range is 100 miles for steady driving and 63 miles for stop and go driving between battery charges.

and this is much more vital in small companies lacking the broad marketability or ownership of giant corporations.

What is most disturbing in this area of stockholder rights is the trend among companies with pre-emptive rights to do away with them. Companies claim it gives them more flexibility in financing, but stockholder prerogatives are few enough, it seems to me, without taking away this one.

MRS. RYAN IS SITTING FOR THE MITCHELLS TONIGHT.

SOME PEOPLE WILL DO ANYTHING FOR MONEY!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Family, home, health. You should fill your day. Take the time to express your faith, your membership in the local community. Evening parties wind up fairly early.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Visits, expressions of your deeper feelings are favored. Current events are to be long remembered, some of them never to be repeated.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Secret connections come to general notice, with less surprise than anticipated. Find a way to share your strength and faith with others.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Romantic interest threads all through this busy Sunday with its great traditions and opportunities for fluent expression. Get an early start.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Mental pursuits are favored over physical activity. Family gatherings prove interesting. There is something you ought to put into words while the opportunity is at hand.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Within reach is some long needed reward — perhaps material, more likely symbolic. Reach out to show your inner self where you count most.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Surprises should include easing of a chronic stress, the prospect of material advancement. Be happy with those you've shared events with lately.

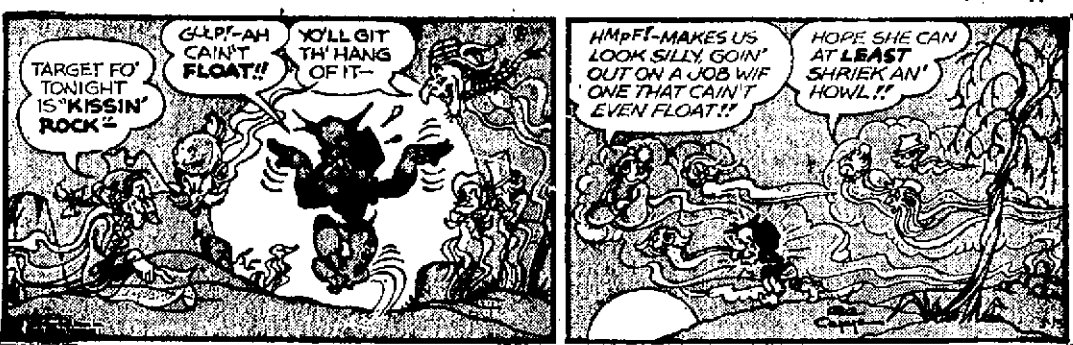

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Leave business and career aside altogether; resolve old personal differences, and build sound family relations for future enjoyment.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have acknowledgements to make, and a very good reason for making them now. Speak out, fully and gently on this first day of the rest of your life.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Go along with your group. What you see as not very tightly organized may be just the thing for the sentimental needs of nearly everybody.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): In the midst of this sociable Sunday, reconciliation arises with just a little urging. Make the most of it; let old differences go.

49er football fortunes escalating? test tonight

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

"I've been talking to Pat Malley," athletic director Low Comer of Long Beach State U. was saying, "and he tells me that every pro-

Hopefully, the people of Long Beach have gotten the report.

Otherwise there may be more scows than fans in Veterans Stadium tonight at 7:30 when Jim Stangeland's Long Beach State U. team concludes spring football practice with its annual encounter against the Alumni.

Admission is $1 and includes a chance on an automobile, which will be given away at halftime.

The Alumni lineup is one of the most talented in the history of the series. It includes Jeff Severson (Washington Redskins), Bryan Shaw, Carl Moler, Jeff Riggen, Jerry Otterson, Harvey McGee and Shawn McKinney.

The Varsity will showcase a host of standout transfers, including offensive tackle Bruce Barclay, defensive ends Miles Greer, Bruce Jacobson and Scott Ward, and defensive backs Steve Nichols, Mike Libbee, Greg Bailey, Dan Shaw, Will Ector and Ernie Rivers. It is in the defensive department that the 49ers have undergone a major overhaul. Last season LBSU worked to an 8-4 season with virtually no defense. The 49ers gave up 231 points in 12 contests.

While LBSU gave up a lot of points, it also put quite a few — 335 — on the board, and most of that production is returning.

Included among the returnees are quarterback Randy Drake, a two-year starter; fullback Lynn Hughes, and wide receiver Ken Matthews, who has caught 54 passes in two years as a 49er.

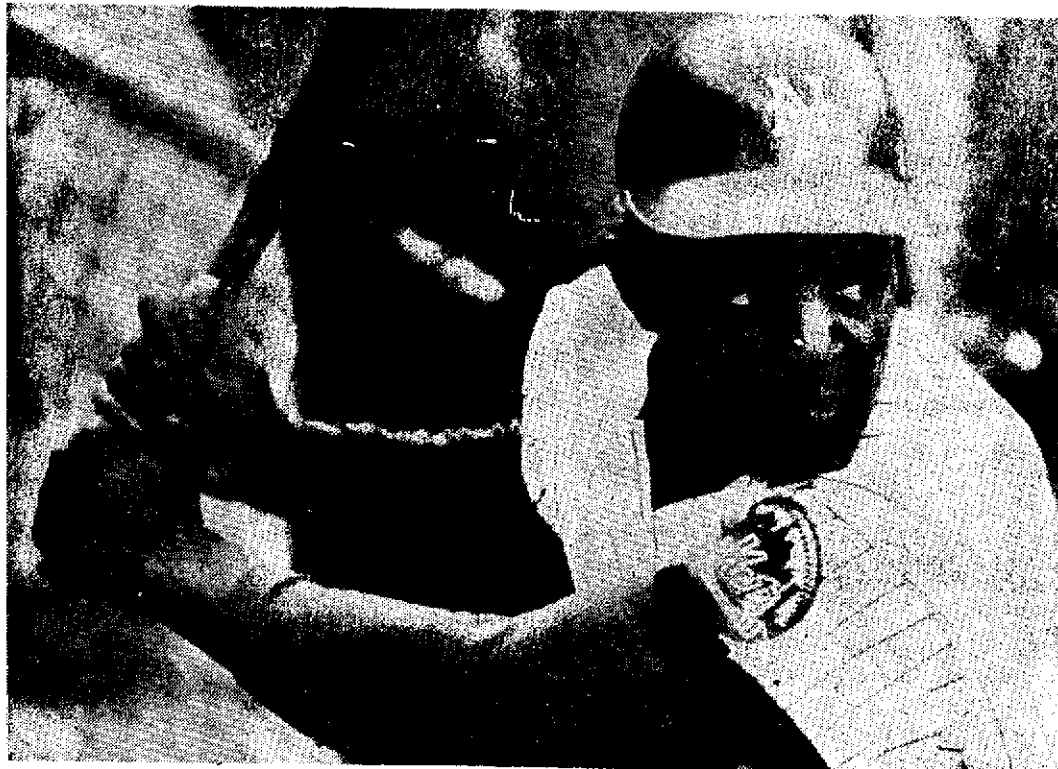

Tailback Terry Metcalf, who scored an NCAA record 29 touchdowns last fall, won't participate tonight. He is spending the weekend at the Playboy Mansion in Chicago where he is being honored as one of the magazine's 1972 pre-season all-Americans.

Tonight's offensive unit also will feature all-PCAA center Steve Hammitt and standout tackle Jon Vogel.

Despite the apparent oneness of the annual contest — the Alumni is 0-3 — player-coach Severson predicts an upset tonight.

"We've got several surprises planned for the varsity," Severson reported before heading for the Other Place, the Alumni headquarters.

Severson would say little about the surprises, but did promise appearances from both "The Phantom" and "The Noblest 49er of Them All."

'SAY HEY KID' IS BACK IN TOWN

There were few more fans in stands at Shea Stadium when New York Mets took field for customary batting practice Friday evening. Obviously, Willie Mays first appearance in Mets uniform was reason. "Say Hey Kid" hit one out of park in practice, but did not play in game which Mets won, 2-1.

'Walton's conduct out of my hands,' says Wooden

Special to the I. P.T.

PORTLAND—UCLA basketball coach John Wooden said Friday he was surprised that all-America center Bill Walton "went quite as far as he did" in an anti-war demonstration that led to his arrest.

Walton was arrested, booked and released on bail from Van Nuys jail Thursday after being taken into custody along with 50 other students. They had occupied UCLA's administration building and refused to disperse when ordered to by Los Angeles police.

"I really felt Bill would probably disperse when he was told to," said Wooden, who was in Portland Friday for a sports clinic. "I wasn't particularly surprised he was involved in this demonstration."

"He's very much against the war in Vietnam. He's an emotional youngster and you know where he stands all the time." Asked if Walton would face disciplinary action if convicted of charges filed against him Thursday, Wooden said: "That's not in my bailiwick at all. It is out of season and a student's conduct is out of my hands."

Wooden was asked if there were similarities between the Walton case and the one six years ago in which Mike Lynn was forced to sit out an entire season after pleading guilty to unlawful possession of a credit card.

"Mike Lynn was put on university probation and I had no choice on that," said the UCLA coach. "I'm not free to say if I would have taken any action if the school hadn't."

Record run in '500' trials?

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A run at the records seems assured for today's initial 500-mile speedway time trials, with the "battle for the pole" considered as wide open as any in recent years.

About 250,000 fans are expected to jam the famed 2½-mile racing layout, expecting to see record speeds that have marked nearly two weeks of tuneups in the battle for 33 spot at race time.

If the weather holds, track conditions will be near-perfect for the opening day of the trials. Unlike last year, when Mark Donohue was the odds-on choice for the pole and the fastest qualifier — though he wound up second to Peter Revson — there is no such top favorite this time.

However, 1968 Speedway champ Bobby Unser, Revson and Gary Bettenhausen could be the trio to beat this year.

Unser, in one of Dan Gurney's brand new Eagles, was clocked earlier this week at an unofficial speed of nearly 195 miles per hour. Through Thursday, only Revson, Redondo Beach, and Bettenhausen, Tinley Park, Ill., had also surpassed the 191 mph mark.

They and other top contenders will be shooting for the one-lap record of 179.354 and four-lap mark of 178.696 that won the pole for Revson last year.

It will also be a battle between the British-made McLaren machines and Gurney's Eagles, all powered by four-cylinder turbo-charged Offenhauser engines, and the Coyotes of three-time race winner A. J. Foyt, equipped with eight-cylinder Ford engines, as are the cars of veterans Lloyd Ruby and Jim Hurtubise.

Roger Penske, owner of the Donohue and Bettenhausen cars, said he wouldn't be surprised to see his two McLarens and those of Revson and Johncock, who are also teammates, qualify in the first two rows.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see an average speed of 193.5 mph by the pole car," Penske said.

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS — The Milwaukee Brewers and Minnesota Twins battled to a curfew-halted 21-inning 3-3 tie Friday night in the second-longest game in American League history.

The game will be resumed in the 22nd inning prior to today's regularly scheduled afternoon game.

The 21-inning 6-hour, 35-minute affair in which the Twins used six pitchers and the Brewers five — fell just one inning short of the league record of 22, set in 1967 when the Washington Senators defeated the Chicago White Sox, 6-5.

The longest game in major league history was 26 innings. The longest night game in the majors was the Houston Astros' 1-0 victory over the New York Mets in 24 innings in 1968.

Tommy Reynolds, batting .100 with one run batted in, skidded a two-run, pinch-hit single between third and short to pull the Brewers into a 3-3 tie in the seventh.

The hit came off Dave LaRoche, who came in after Dick Woodson gave up a double to Joe Lahoud and walked two men.

The Twins broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth on Rod Carew's run-scoring single and a walk to Bobby Darwin with the bases loaded by Bill Parsons, who walked five in 4 1-3 innings.

Robbie pokes homer, fun; fifth for Sutton

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA—Frank Robinson is a man who exudes inspiration.

Most often he does it with his bat, such as Friday night when he thundered a mammoth three-run home run to power the Dodgers to a 6-1 victory over Philadelphia as Don Sutton hurled his fifth successive victory.

But Robbie inspires in other ways, too, such as with his performance early Friday morning during a he does what he can to loosen it up."

Even the manager, a man not always impressed by merriment among his players, was amused.

"I think that was great," Alton said. "I held a meeting and I guess Robbie figured he should hold one, too."

Robinson spared no one. Maury Wills became "the former captain" and "Bill Russell's caddy," and Willie Davis was introduced as "the man with the Cadillac" after a homer in which he ran to first by way of the Mets' dugout shaking all their hands."

Finally, Robinson brought pitcher Mike Strahler, who's worked in only one game all season, all the way to the front of the bus and formally introduced him to Alton as "the 25th member of the team."

There was laughter and the Dodgers were still talking about Robbie's dissertation Friday night.

"That's the kind of thing that can really spark a club," acknowledged Wills. "But it has to be taken for

Cushion Night, so Angels sit down

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

In commemoration of Cushion Night, the Angels sat down on the job Friday.

When last seen, they were traipsing off into the clubhouse dragging their derrieres behind them and ruefully reflecting upon a 6-3 loss to the New York Yankees.

The Angels are also back in a reclining position today — tied for last place in the American League West with Kansas City. Unfortunately, there was nothing to cushion the shock for manager Del Rice or the 12,356 customers who came out on another give-away night.

Not only was management in a magnanimous mood, but so were the players. The Angels gave away runs on things like wild pitches and an infinite variety of misplays.

Perhaps the final Yankee run of the night could be used as a synopsis of the entire evening. Hitting against Mel Queen, Thurmon Munson lined an innocent-looking single to right field.

In less than adroit fashion, outfielder Bob Oliver succeeded in letting the ball skip by him and Munson lit out for third. He was just arriving there when Sandy Alomar fielded Oliver's relay and generously pegged the ball into the Angel dugout, permitting Munson to come home.

If there was any solace to be found, it was the performance of Ken McMullen. Emerging from a four-day stint on the bench, Mac the Knifecelebrated his return by lining four consecutive singles and also drove in his first run of the season. His average jumped from .173 to .232.

Actually, the Angels

outhit the invaders 11-9, but again there was an acute lack of hitting with men in scoring position.

Leo Cardenas hit his third homer of the year for the initial Angel run in the fourth which temporarily tied the score at 1-1, but it came with the bases emp-

What's gone wrong with Lakewood High's Moore League championship baseball team? Runner-up Wilson whacked the Lancers, 7-4, Friday night in the second game of a doubleheader at Blair Field to hand John Herbold's team its third successive setback.

In a season marked by the unusual, the biggest puzzle is Lakewood, which won 11 of its first 12 games to clinch the title, then staggered to the tape with the three losses just one week prior to begin-

Jordan's Rock Harmon had tied the score in the seventh as he scored Guy Megliola from third with a double down the rightfield line. Harmon scored the other Panther run in the fifth on a single by Brian Norton.

Kellogg was then relieved by Rich Whitaker, who pitched four consecutive balls trying to get the batter to go for a bad pitch.

Both teams finished at 8-7 in league play. A decision will be reached later on who advances to the playoffs.

Defending champion Ken Rosewall scored seven successive points in a third-set tie breaker Friday night to down Arthur Ashe 6-4, 6-3, 7-6 and advance to the finals of the $50,000 World Championship of Tennis in Dallas.

Rosewall will meet another Australian, Rod Laver, in Sunday's finals.

Laver won his semifinal match by coming from behind 4-6, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0 against Marty Riessen.

"Vida is coming along well," says Oakland manager Dick Williams, who is still 16 days from his first scheduled start. "He's throwing a little more every day and doing a lot of running."

49er foursome breaks Fresno 440 relay mark

FRESNO (Special) — Long Beach State University's 440 relay team, minus leadoff man Terry Metcalf, set a meet record during the first day of the West Coast Relays Friday.

The 49ers' foursome of Jim Brady (who replaced Metcalf), Wayne Stevenson, Oscar Beasley and Royce Ford clocked 40.6, breaking the meet record of 40.8 set by Cal Poly (San Luis Obispo) in 1969.

One other meet record was broken when the University of British Columbia ran 9:43.9 in the distance medley. The old mark was 9:46.9 by Occidental in 1969.

Ford also set a school record in the 100-meter dash at 10.4 despite finishing fourth. The 49ers mile relay team of Gary Nickerson, Stevenson, Dennis Ruby and Phil Moses posted a seasonal best of 3:13.6 but was fourth.

Pilots steer past Pioneer

By BARRY UNGLES

The San Gabriel Valley League race ended on a wild note Friday afternoon with Excelsior knocking off Pioneer 3-2 in an extra-inning thriller and California trouncing Bellflower 8-1 to set up a three-way tie for first place.

Excelsior, Pioneer and California all finished with identical 10-5 records in the SGVL.

Steve Bryant scored from third base on a pass ball by Pioneer catcher

Ruben Elizalde in the ninth inning to give Excelsior its third consecutive win over the Titans this year.

Bryant led off the rally with a single to left field. After Mark Yriarte sacrificed him to second, Pat Priddy hit a sharp single to right to send Bryant to third. Then on a 1-0 pitch, to Ken Dickinson, the ball popped out of Elizalde's glove and Bryant scored under the tag of pitcher Gil Rodriguez.

Pioneer got on the scoreboard first when Ricky Carrillo laced a single to center with the bases loaded in the third, scoring Lou Mojarro and Robert Reyes.

But it has been the custom of Excelsior this year to come-from-behind and win games. "We have won five come-from-behind games this year, and three of them have been against Pioneer," said a jubilant Bob Douglas, Excelsior's head coach.

The Pilots tied the game up in the bottom of the fifth when they cashed in on two errors and a pair of walks.

With one out, Bryant reached first when shortstop Rich Garcia pulled the first baseman off the bag. Two walks loaded the bases. Rodriguez then tried to pick off Bryant and threw the ball away with Bryant scoring and Yriarte and pitcher Kenny DeVore moving up a base. Priddy then grounded to the shortstop with Yriarte crossing the plate with the tying run.

Pioneer had golden opportunities to score in the last two inning but was turned away by winning pitcher DeVore.

"DeVore did a good job out there today and that was a crucial double play he made in the eighth," praised Douglas. The twin-killer came with one out and the bases loaded on a come-backer to DeVore.

CALIFORNIA scored four times in the first inning and breezed to an 8-1 victory over Bellflower. Doug Holderman had a big day at the plate with a single, triple and a two-run homer in three trips to the plate.

Norwalk scored once in the seventh and twice in the eighth to outslug Paramount 11-10. Frank Gadliano's triple scored the tying run in the eighth frame and Phil DuBois' sacrifice fly won it.

Ross, Poly track title hopes hurt

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

Poly High's hopes for a 1972 CIF track and field championship may be over even before today's quarterfinal meet begins for the Jackrabbits at Citrus College in Azusa.

No. 1 sprinter Leonard Ross, fifth in the Southern Section finals as a junior last year, is sidelined for the rest of the season with a muscle tear, according to coach Jim Richardson. "We thought that it might be only a slight strain after last week's league meet," says Richardson, "and I was hopeful early this week he might be able to run" before the injury was diagnosed by a specialist.

"We figure with Leonard out, we've lost anywhere from two to 10 points in the finals," says Richardson. Ross was counted on to place in the 100, 200 and run a leg on the Hares' 440 relay team.

Catching Santa Ana would have been difficult even with Ross. Without him, it may be impossible, although Richardson says the loss could pull his team together.

"No one really expects a lot out of us now, but we still have some people who can score points." The Jackrabbits have 14 varsity qualifying positions in one of four meets that will advance athletes to the semi-finals next Friday at Cerritos College.

Only the top two runners in each heat or top six field event performers earn a spot in the finals. Other qualifying sites are Chaffey, Redondo and Westminster high schools. At all four locations, pole vault begins at 11:30 a.m., first running event at 12:30 p.m.

Although in different heats, the CIF's top two high hurdlers, James Royal of Poly and Stan Whigham of Palmdale, will run today at Citrus. Both have negotiated the 39 inch prep barriers in 14.0 this season.

Arland Ford from Quartz Hill is given a good chance to place high in the sprint finals in two weeks. Crespi of Encino has a strong finals led by shotputter Randy Cross (67-6 1/2), pole vaulter Tim Curran (15-6) and hurdler-long jumper Tony Patta (14.6-19.8-23-3 1/2).

Athletes from the San Gabriel Valley League also will be at Citrus today.

St. Anthony has six athletes and a 440 relay team running at Westminster where the Suburban League's best athletes will compete. Jordan's two good high jumpers, Darryl Robinson and Rick Moore, will compete at Redondo.

Boone leads Gahr to title

The Suburban League championship game turned into a marathon Friday.

The 13-inning game was the longest in Neff history, but the Trojans couldn't hold out as Gahr took the game and the league title with a 3-2 win.

Alan Hander scored the winning run on Steve Walden's hit to break a nine-inning stalemate. Walden was top hitter of the evening, recording three hits in five at bats and one RBI.

Gladiator pitcher Dan Boone went the distance in the endurance contest, striking out 14 Trojans and walking two while hitting one batter.

Neff starter Don Warner, who scored the first run for his team, was relieved in the eleventh inning by Tony Specht. The twosome accounted for seven strikeouts and four walks.

Even though the pitching was outstanding, the game was won in the field as both catchers nabbed runners at the plate and clean outs were recorded on the base paths.

In the only other Suburban League game, Glenn topped Artesia 2-1, in a make-up of an earlier rain-out. Pitcher Rick Carter recorded the victory and scored one of the two winning runs.

won a 5-3 decision over Warren in the season closer. Oilier pitcher Bill Daniels struck out seven and walked three batters and allowed both Bear hits.

Larry Weimers struck out 11 batters to clinch the Santa Fe League title for St. John Bosco with a 6-4 victory over Cantwell.

Country-western programs on tap

By GEORGE ERES
TV-Radio Editor

Country and western music fans have a few TV programs to look forward to.

Ch. 11 at 8 tonight airs taped highlights of the seventh annual Country and Western Music Awards held March 13 at the John Wayne Theater at Knotts Berry Farm.

Dick Clark hosted the show and among performers are Lynn Anderson, Roger Miller, Roy Clark and Kenny Rogers and the First Edition.

LATER ON this month, May 31, NBC will carry "Opryland, U.S.A." with Tennessee Ernie Ford and Johnny Cash co-hosting an hour musical-variety program celebrating the opening of the 365-acre "Opryland" near Nashville, Tenn.

"Opryland," which opens May 27, in addition to rides and other attractions, will feature five separate areas each with distinct musical themes. Country and Western, jazz and blues, folk and contemporary music will be celebrated.

JIM JORDAN, radio's Fibber McGee, is shown during a recent visit to KFI where he recorded for the station's anniversary broadcast.

In addition to Grand Ole Opry headliners the TV show will feature Danny Thomas, Carol Lawrence and Leslie Uggams.

COME AUGUST, Boots Randolph will be on NBC with a special called "Star Spangled Boots." Saxophonist Randolph heads the cast including trumpeter Doc Severinsen, singer Barbara McNair and 1968 Grammy Award-winning guitarist Chet Atkins.

Lovers of Boots' "Yakety Sax," will also hear him soloing in "King of the Road" and "Light My Fire" as well as dueting with guests.

RADIO NOTES: "Fibber McGee and Molly" returns to KFI (640 AM) starting at 7:05 p.m. Sunday and continuing each Sunday thereafter.

Jim Jordan, radio's Fibber McGee, visited the station during its Anniversary Broadcast and, as it turned out, there's a pretty big demand among radio listeners for more of the "Golden Age" of radio stuff.

The "Fibber McGee and Molly" show follows "The Lone Ranger" on the station. You also get "Lum N' Abner" here at 7:15 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

MRS. DOROTHY BRAZELTON, mother of Capt. Michael Lee Brazelton, of Inglewood, a prisoner of war in Hanoi for some six years who has been adopted by the City of Long Beach, will be interviewed on KGER (1330 AM) at 2:30 p.m., Monday.

KLON (88.1 FM) of Long Beach will join the Southern California Community Radio Network for a four-hour series of programs on environment and ecology starting at 5 p.m., May 18.

The network includes seven Southern California non-commercial public FM radio stations. They include KUSC (91.5), KPCC (89.3), KCRW (89.9), KEDC (88.5), KXLU (88.9), KLLU (89.7) and KBPK (90.1) of Buena Park.

Each station has produced a half-hour segment dealing with an aspect of the ecology problem and the eight programs will be aired on all stations.
